Caltrans unveils Hatton Canyon Freeway show

By MICHAEL GARDNER

CALTRANS OFFICIALS, on a tour-readying local government for the expected summer release of the Hatton Canyon Freeway environmental impact statement, lobbied heavily for the project before the Carmel City Council in a special meeting Tuesday afternoon.

As expected, the residents on hand were evenly split over the proposed freeway with those living in Hatton Canyon calling for the widening of existing Highway 1 as the best traffic solution while those with homes along Highway 1 equally adamant that any project be developed in Hatton Canyon.

The only hint of a council position came from Helen Arnold, who once again chastised Caltrans for slighting the widening of Highway 1 alternatives in lieu of the Hatton Canyon Freeway project.

But Caltrans officials insisted that widening of Highway 1 — even to six lanes in heavily-traveled stretches — would at best be a "band-aid" approach and eventually a freeway would have to be developed anyway.

The proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway, expected to cost about $28 million by the time construction begins in 1989, would be a four-lane highway cutting through Hatton Canyon from approximately Carpenter Street to Carmel Valley Road.

Originally proposed to extend to the Carmel River bridge, Caltrans now recommends that there be a transition from freeway to a two-lane highway south of Rio Road. To accomplish this transition, the current plan is to develop just two lanes from Carmel Valley Road south to Rio Road and connect there with existing Highway 1.

Interchanges are expected at Carpenter and Carmel Valley roads, but specific details are not due until the design portion of the project begins once the environmental impact statement is approved by the state Transportation Commission and the Federal Highway Administration, since federal highway funds will assist in financing the Hatton Canyon Freeway.

Jerry Laumer, deputy district director for Caltrans in San Luis Obispo, got the study session started by saying that they have been meeting with local government "as a prelude to the release of the environmental impact statement (EIS)" that is due out in July.

According to Laumer, Caltrans will hold an August public hearing in the Carmel area on the EIS. The EIS then is reworked and a final report also subjected to public hearings.

THE STATE Transportation Commission and Federal Highway Administration then are to approve what Caltrans calls a "preferred alternative" before construction can begin.

"At this time we do not have a preferred alternative," Laumer indicated.

That decision is expected by the end of this year, he continued. Monies for the freeway project are not budgeted in the Caltrans five-year program until the 1989-90 fiscal year.

Ken Jones, the project engineer who has worked on the Highway 1 traffic problem since 1947, told the council that an average of 52,000 cars per day travel the route between Ocean Avenue and Carpenter Street.

The traffic has been increasing by a 1,000-car-per-day average "for many years past and no doubt many years in the future," he said.

Jones pointed out that the 52,000 car figure is an average and does not provide an accurate picture of peak traffic.

In giving a brief history lesson on the proposed project, Jones said that in 1947 the then-Department of Highways first began to study widening Highway 1 to four lanes from Carpenter Street to Rio Road.

It was in 1953 that the Hatton Canyon

Hope for a new era

Dear Editor:

As a people in a democratic republic, we often need to reiterate our rights. For instance, one of Mayor Eastwood's campaign promises was to get rid of secrecy in government, which is obviously a sentiment that a great majority of us share.

To that end, all deliberations of elected bodies, and bodies chosen by elected bodies in an advisory or other capacity, must adhere strictly to the very specific provisions in the law which permit closed sessions.

We are encouraged to know that such closed sessions will be as few and as brief as possible, and that all members of the public (including the press) will enjoy their rights to attend open meetings. Unless litigation or specific personnel problems are involved, concerns and comments by public representatives on public issues should be aired in public sessions.

The opening paragraphs of the Ralph M. Brown Act of the California Government Code say it more beautifully than the law usually allows itself to do. It is a joy to read this declaration of policy in Section 54950:

"In enacting this chapter, the Legislature finds and declares that the public commissions, boards and councils and the other public agencies in this State exist to aid in the conduct of the people's business. It is the intent of the law that their actions be taken openly and that their deliberations be conducted openly.

"The people of this State do not yield in their sovereignty to the agencies which serve them. The people, in delegating authority, do not give their public servants the right to decide what is good for the people to know and what is not good for them to know. The people insist on remaining informed so that they may retain control over the instruments they have created."

Long live candor and truth!

A job well done

Dear Editor:

In response to a letter printed in your May 8 issue concerning the carefully tailored Eastwood campaign, might as well do it right.

Certainly to win, the figures in the January poll had to be reversed. As a Carmel voter, I have no problem dealing with the recent story that all three of our new mayor's campaign team were previously employed by oil companies to defeat an offshore oil issue in Santa Barbara. They were called upon by Mr. Eastwood for a different purpose. Mayor Townsend and her local helpers were indeed no match — i.e. the first TV debate — plain poor form and embarrassing. Who needs that? In my opinion Mayor Townsend lost the election that night.

The smashing 73-27 percent landslide is the result of Mayor Eastwood not resting on his laurels. He is to be congratulated for a job well done.

A runner's thanks

Dear Editor:

I wish to address some of the negative letters published prior to the Big Sur Marathon. I would hope future letter writers make an effort to get the facts correct before crying wolf. This is especially important when implying the possibility of mishandling of funds for charity.

I think the media coverage of the marathon was very good and hope those interested in having this as a regular event were at the public meeting May 21 at Carmel High School.

As a participating runner I wish to thank Caltrans for allowing restriction of traffic on the highway for several hours. My thanks to the many businesses which supported the event. Many thanks to anyone living on the route for being at roadside and giving us encouragement. I hope your enjoyment far exceeded any inconvenience.

We all thank the volunteers who filled the varied needs to make this event the success it was and shall be.

Our very special thanks to Judge Burleigh for having a dream and the willingness and determination to go to the finish line.

I hope to see all of you next year.

Flag display

Dear Editor:

The Carmel American Legion Post 512 has started a display of American flags in front of the post home. These flags will be flown on holidays and special occasions. We are asking people to donate flags to honor veterans who have passed away. The flags are the ones that were on the caskets of the deceased. These flags will have the names of the veteran printed on the border, so the donor will know that the flag will always fly in his or her memory.

If you have a flag to donate please call the Carmel Legion Post 512 at 624-9941 or Alvin Chapin at 624-1404 and the flag will be picked up.

A reflection of honesty

Dear Editor:

In his letter-to-editor May 8 Jack Harms pointed out that under the influence of paid political professionals Carmel has been propelled into the arena of big-time politics. Taking the edge off the full meaning of the term "big-time politics," some local residents are likely to agree and share Harms' dismay. However, the implications need a little further consideration.

There is nothing inherently wrong or negative in the use of professionals, and, in fact, their appearance at this time may reflect the increased complexity of legislating effective rules for Carmel.

Professionals are paid to facilitate political decisions — not to make them — usually by molding public opinion. The assumption is that their employer is making the decisions and assuming responsibility for the consequences.

The Santa Barbara oil issue is not encouraging and points out that beyond their skillful and salable expertise political professionals may be expected to show little in the way of ethical considerations. Hired guns don't pick their targets and seldom question the motives of those who pay them. The image is one of cynicism. They simply get paid and do a job, any job.

By the same token they can help to promote positive and healthy ideas as well. For all those people who have faith in Clint Eastwood's sincerity and promote his leadership as mayor of Carmel the hiring of professionals to reach goals is good business and

Youth is for the young

I BELIEVE it was George Bernard Shaw who said "Youth is wasted on the young," or something to that effect.

Of course George was known as a sarcastic sort, but he always made telling and revealing points with his barbs. The young have the health and the vigor to accomplish great things, but often lack the knowledge and experience of the elderly to carry those through. Perhaps this old proverb said it more gently and diplomatically: "If youth but knew, and age were able, then poverty would be a fable."

That's exactly what the Carmel Youth Center would like to do for itself, make poverty a fable forevermore. Although Carmel has been jokingly referred to as a place of "the newly-wed and nearly-dead," there is a great need for a youth center in town, no matter how small the actual youth population is within its one square mile.

Without getting into too much detail there have been a host of problems in the immediate past with the youth center: problems with the board of directors, problems with management of the place, spending on capital improvements that nearly depleted the budget, and the rain-soaked disaster that was The Crosby (or AT&T) golf tournament, from which the center gets a lion's share of its revenues.

But that's all in the past. The Carmel Youth Center has a new board, a new leadership, a new outlook and a fresh transfusion of funds as a result of Clint Eastwood's campaign for mayor. The future now looks rosy. However, it would be foolhardy to depend on those funds (from sales of Clint T-shirts, mugs, books, etc.) as a source of long-term income.

Instead what the youth center needs to do — and this is being negotiated now — is to work with the city of Carmel and the Carmel Unified School District to offer the youth of the entire community (not just the city of Carmel) a varied and stimulating recreational program as well as a place to congregate or just "to be."

The city has expressed interest in helping the youth center by hiring a full-time recreation supervisor and providing for some salary costs, maintenance and janitorial expenses, as well as providing for various facilities (Sunset Center comes to mind). The school district recently approved an inter-agency agreement between the district and the city to provide a recreation program for youth.

Obviously the youth center board is buoyed by all the help (and offers of help) it's getting because it's sorely needed. With the city, school district (and community) behind it the youth center can really make some inroads.

But it would be wishful thinking to hope that the city would give the youth center not only money and manpower, but complete autonomy, which it appears the board of directors is seeking. It would be foolish to think that the city would make such an investment then relinquish any control over it.

The city's involvement must and should be more than monetary. The city's resources should be utilized and its experience, influence and leadership called upon to help the center grow and progress.

What that calls for is all three entities working together to get the youth center healthy and prospering again, and that means having a say in reaching those ends. The center can still maintain some autonomy, but not at the expense of turning away the city and the school district.

The youth don't always know and the aged aren't always able, but by working together they can make poverty for the Carmel Youth Center a fable.

whose fate is best left in the hands of those who touch it daily.

The issue is not "Big Sur development," but rather Big Sur's preservation of its self-determined rural values in a political climate of self-aggrandizing memorial park-barrelling.

Sen. Wilson's hastily drafted, misguided legislation to "preserve and protect" our isolated coastal way of life provides an overlay of oppressive supervision from a distance of 3,000 miles away by people who will be appointed to determine what's good for our destinies.

Sen. Wilson's bill (S. 2159) deserves to die in committee. The salubrious "sufficient wisdom" of the good senator from San Diego is abhorrent to all of us who have sweated blood over the shaping of the state's mandated county-administered land use plan.

Robert Cross

makes sense. The immediate future of Carmel will be seen as a reflection of the mayor's honesty and not of those who work for him.

The ultimate consideration, however, lies with the residents of Carmel, who have an observable habit of becoming complacent. It is their responsibility not to be swayed toward political acts contrary to how they view their own best interests. This town is small enough that political motives should not be easily concealed, and individual voices can still be heard. The last outpost of the democratic ideal may lie predominantly within the active participation of a small community in deciding its own destiny.

Let us all agree with Sen. Wilson that "Big Sur (is) a natural treasure." Indeed, it just might be one of the few national treasures

Archer: 'I know a jury...will exonerate me'

By MICHAEL GARDNER

DAVID ARCHER, the enigmatic volunteer for Clint Eastwood's successful Carmel mayoral campaign, says he is innocent of all charges in the April 30 slaying of Ray Podell.

Archer, in a series of exclusive telephone interviews conducted this week from Monterey County jail in Salinas where he is being held on a $1 million bail, on the advice of his attorney would not provide details of his actions on the day of the murder in Pebble Beach.

But Archer did talk for a couple of hours about his background, his role in Eastwood's campaign and how he has been treated in jail since his May 5 arrest in San Luis Obispo County.

According to police, Podell went to an unoccupied Pebble Beach estate on quiet Hacienda Drive to repair several broken windows.

Apparently Podell walked in on a burglar and was shot and killed by the suspect, whom police claim is Archer.

"That will all come out in the trial," Archer said when asked why he fled the area after the murder. "I will state again, I am innocent of the charges against me. This is the way we will plead in court — not guilty."

Archer, who was living in Carmel at the time of the murder, is scheduled to appear in court Friday morning for a bail reduction hearing. His preliminary hearing to determine whether there is enough evidence to bind him over for trial is tentatively scheduled to begin June 2.

Apparently acceding that there will be a trial, Archer also promised to have Eastwood subpoenaed to the stand as a defense witness.

"I'm going to call Clint Eastwood to testify at my trial. I can't tell you why. I will tell you that he will be subpoenaed," Archer said.

For his part, Eastwood has declined comment on the case except to release a prepared statement after Archer was apprehended.

"In my campaign for mayor of Carmel I was fortunate in having over 200 volunteers who assisted me in various aspects of the day-to-day effort," Eastwood stated.

"David Archer was one of those volunteers. He did not have a major role in the campaign and I knew nothing of his personal background."

Statements by Eastwood and other comments by his campaign manager Sue Hutchinson claiming that Archer was just another volunteer angered the suspect to the point of bringing his case to the public through the media, Archer said.

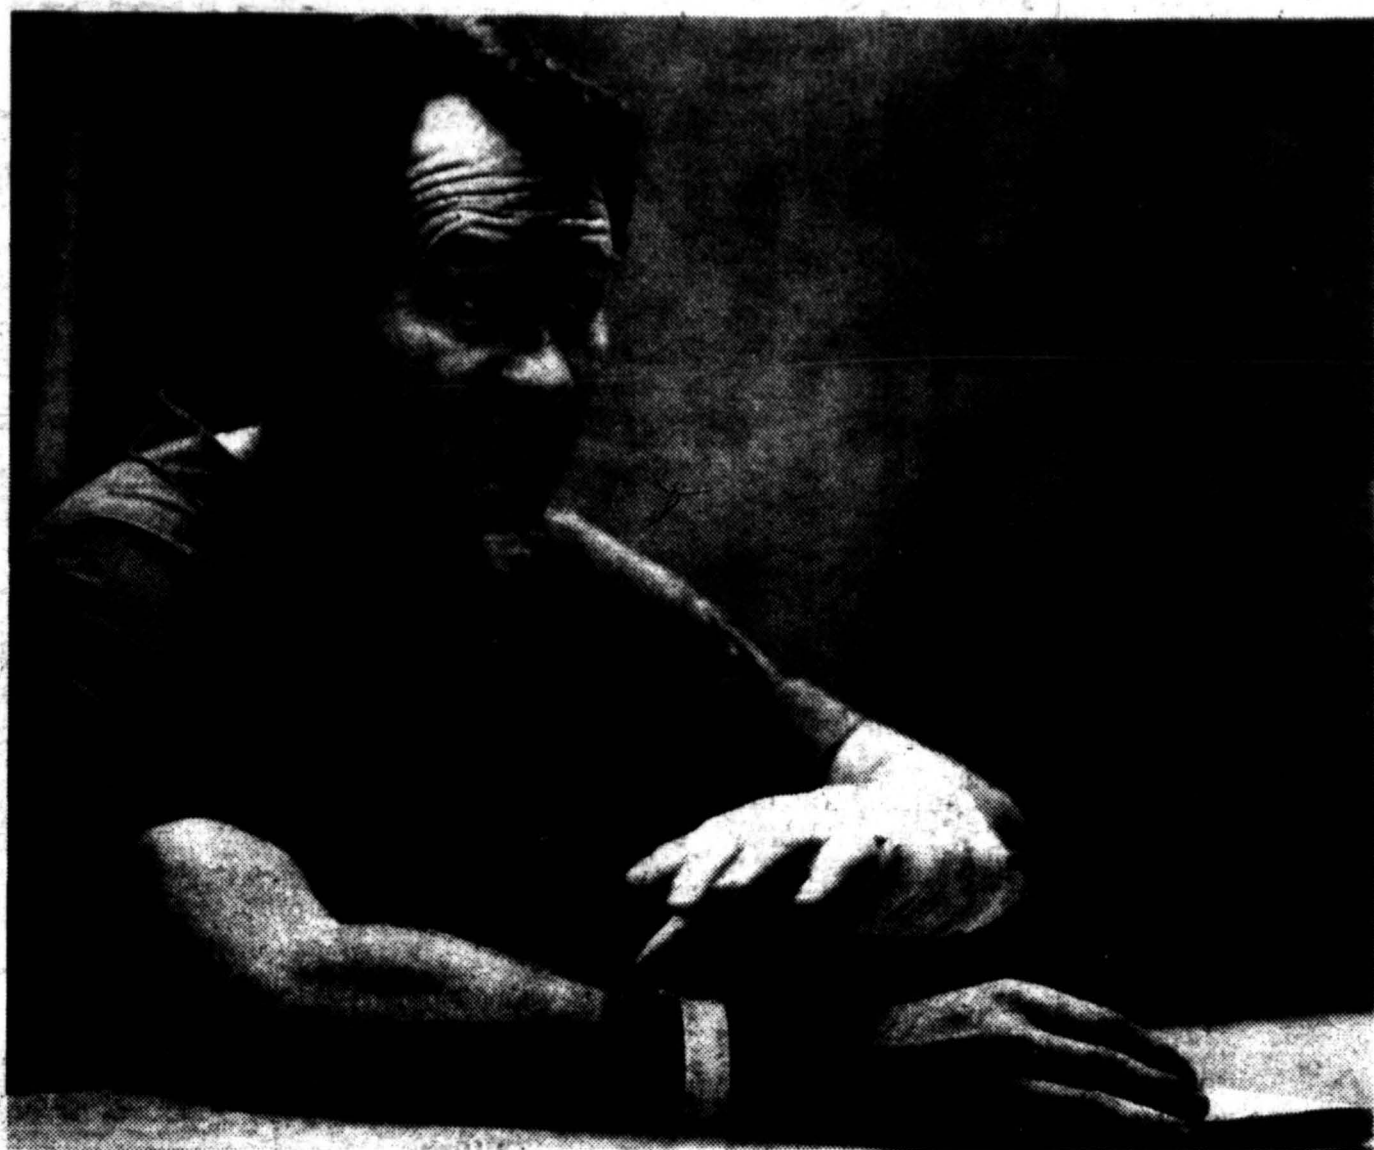

ARCHER FIRED his court-appointed public defender because the attorney refused to allow him to talk to the media.

His current attorney, Frank Dice of Salinas, said he will allow press interviews as long as Archer declines comment on the specifics of the case.

"I have a right to respond in public. I'm still a citizen of the United States...I want to defend myself in the public arena. I think I have that right. All I'm asking for is vindication. I believe the truth will come out," Archer said.

Archer, who said he has read and viewed most newspaper and television accounts of the murder and his arrest, does not believe that his case will be tried in the media.

"I don't think so. From what I have read

DAVID ARCHER, a splint on his left wrist he says was needed after police slammed him to the ground, says he is innocent of charges and from what I have seen no one has convicted me yet in the press," Archer said.

"A jury of 12 people in this country decides...I thank God we have that type of system...I have faith in that system. I know a jury, after they've heard all of the facts, will exonerate me."

In certain instances where a case dominates headlines, motions are instituted to close the hearings to the press because of the pre-trial publicity.

Archer contends that he will demand an open hearing "so the public knows the truth...not innuendo and hearsay."

A familiar face at the numerous neighborhood teas and political forums, Archer said it is important to him that Carmel residents get his side of the story as to his role in Eastwood's campaign.

And that is why he says he's talking to the press.

"I would leave it up to them to decide what role I played in the campaign," he said.

Archer sees himself as one of the key movers and shakers in the campaign, claiming to have on several occasions made decisions that saved Eastwood votes and helped the candidate avoid public embarrassment.

Eastwood's people, however, paint a different portrait of Archer, saying that Archer became a nuisance and was repeatedly asked to stop misrepresenting himself as an assistant campaign manager and press contact.

Archer described himself as "p.r. (public relations) and front man" for the Eastwood campaign.

"I do feel I had a key role in the campaign. I don't like people lying about me," he said.

Archer said he was introduced to Eastwood through his wife, Hope Archer, in December 1983. Over the last two and one-half years, Archer said he and his wife attended numerous social functions where Eastwood was also a guest.

WHEN Eastwood announced his candidacy, Archer said he had just finished the first edition of his binders for telephone books. Archer sold advertising for those binders.

With some time on his hands, Archer said he decided to sign on as a volunteer and was put to work helping set up the telephone system. Archer's wife works with the telephone company.

Archer claims he assisted in media relations after Hutchinson got "in over her head" during an interview with the Wall Street Journal.

"The candidate was elected in some ways in spite of her. She was a little too rigid and had a problem dealing with people," Archer said.

But then Archer also praises Hutchinson for her work on the campaign. "I respect her very much. I want that made very clear."

Archer said there was internal problems between himself, Hutchinson and other campaign workers.

Asked why they didn't get along, Archer said, "I don't know. I suppose it was petty jealousies. I ignored those things. My goal was to elect Clint Eastwood."

At one point in the campaign, Archer said he was asked by Hutchinson to stop going to the coffees. Archer said he went to Eastwood, who told him that he wanted him there.

"They stopped bothering me about the coffees. It was rather obvious Clint wanted me there...It was a little power play."

Archer described several incidents during the campaign where he believed he made crucial decisions, was given responsibilities beyond those assigned to other volunteers and also helped save Clint some embarrassment.

For example, Archer claims that it was his decision to accept the gifts of campaign buttons so that they could be provided to the Carmel Youth Center as a fund raiser. "If I had said no the buttons would never have been here."

On April Fool's Day there was a mixup in Eastwood's coffee calendar and he went to a home at 3:30 p.m. when he was scheduled to be there at 5 p.m. Eastwood had another appointment at the same time on another side of town, Archer said.

Archer said that he stalled the crowd long enough to give the office time for Eastwood to call in and find out where he was supposed to be.

After arriving, Eastwood "as I recall, converted everyone in the room to vote for him," Archer said.

FROM THEN on, Archer claimed, he "triple-checked" Eastwood's schedule to ensure accuracy.

Not showing up to a scheduled campaign coffee would have generated "headlines" for Eastwood, Archer maintained.

"If he would be asked off the record, Clint would admit that I saved his ass," Archer said.

Archer also contends that he had a key to the office and often made bank deposits, sometimes with as much as $1,000 in cash.

"For somebody who supposedly didn't have much to do with the campaign I would say that was pretty important," Archer said.

The four-in-a-row campaign appearances before large crowds at Mission Ranch was also his idea and he was in charge, Archer said.

"That was my total responsibility. That was my baby," he said.

Archer believes that Eastwood is trying to distance himself from the incident by denying the extent of Archer's involvement in the campaign.

"One, either he has a poor memory and I don't think so; or two he was misquoted, and I don't think so; or three, he made the statement for political expediency," Archer said.

"To make that statement...I have to assume it was for political expediency."

In addition to faulting Eastwood's campaign with statements to the media about his role, Archer also contested press reports that he and his wife are separated and will be divorced.

Archer claims that he and his wife — married since June of 1985 — at first were to be divorced "due to financial considerations, not because we were unhappy." Archer did not elaborate.

"My wife and I are in the process of a reconciliation. We never were separated, legally or otherwise," he said.

Although admitting that he was not there every night, Archer said he was living with his wife in Carmel and on April 30 — the day of Podell's killing — Archer had slept the previous night at the family home.

'If he would be asked off the record, Clint would admit that I saved his ass,' Archer said.

Archer asked that the media leave his wife alone.

"I believe she has had enough trauma from this and I'm certain she would appreciate that the press leave her alone and (allow) her some privacy," he said.

Archer has been held in Monterey County Jail in Salinas for the past two weeks on $1 million bail.

He contends that from the moment of his arrest he has been mistreated and seen deplorable conditions at the jail.

ARCHER SAID when police arrested him in San Luis Obispo County he was thrown to the ground, reinjuring an old wrist sprain.

He claims he was denied access to a doctor and to a dentist until after he complained to television news crews.

Archer contends that the water and toilet facilities in his holding cell the first few days did not work properly.

He said he had problems finding a private attorney because he was denied access to a phone, except during the lunch break and after 5 p.m. when law offices are closed.

He also complained that the jail did not provide toothbrush and toothpaste, nor has the sheriff's department turned over his contact lens kit so that he can take his contacts out and clean them.

He added that prisoners are not allowed disposable shavers. Archer believes this is a serious health hazard because inmates with diseases could cut themselves and the next user of the blade could very well catch the disease.

Archer said he will ask his attorney to file a writ on behalf of all prisoners in the jail complaining about the conditions.

Harvey Nyland, chief of the facility, denied Archer's charges.

Nyland said standard policy is for newly booked prisoners to be allowed "as many calls as they want."

Archer made only one call, according to booking documents. "I have to say he had

Council hears Hatton Canyon Freeway plans

route with interchanges at Carpenter Street, Ocean Avenue and Rio Road was first proposed and the concept was adopted in 1955, Jones said.

Thirty years ago, in 1956, Jones was assigned the task of designing the freeway. But in 1960 the Carmel Hill interchange was built, wiping out hundreds of trees and sending the Monterey Peninsula in an uproar, he explained.

That temporarily halted progress on Hatton Canyon Freeway as studies for alternative routes were launched. In 1967 monies for the purchase of rights-of-way ran out, further slowing a project, Jones said.

Highway 1 from Carpenter Street to Ocean Avenue then was widened to four lanes, but it wasn't until 10 years later that Caltrans officially placed the Hatton Canyon Freeway project in its five-year funding program. The freeway last year was set back a year in that funding program because of state budget problems.

If a decision is made by the end of this year on the preferred alternative, Jones said, "I have 18 months to build the darn thing and then I can retire."

Another Caltrans project engineer, Mike Mortenson, also presented the council with a brief description of alternative projects.

"WE HAVE big city traffic right here in little Carmel," said Mortenson, alluding to the 52,000 cars per day figure.

Basically, the widening alternatives are designed for the stretch between Rio and Carmel Valley roads. The choices are: the addition of a climbing lane for turns ($2.5 million), two more lanes ($3.1 million) or expansion for a six-lane highway ($8 million.)

However, none of the alternatives include an interchange at Carmel Valley Road or Ocean Avenue.

Mortenson called the widening alternatives "band-aids." Traffic would "quickly deteriorate back to Level F" unless the six-lane highway plan is adopted. Even a six-lane highway would reach a Level D within 10 or 15 years, he said. (Level F is the worst Caltrans rating and means that traffic is at a standstill during peak use.)

Jones agreed, "There is no way to widen the existing highway and solve your present traffic needs."

Construction of Hatton Canyon Freeway would cut traffic on existing Highway 1 by half, Jones estimated.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold, long a supporter of widening the existing highway at least until a decision is made on Hatton Canyon Freeway, criticized Caltrans for not considering an interchange at Carmel Valley Road as part of the widening alternatives.

Arnold believes that a Carmel Valley Road interchange and Highway 1 widening would alleviate much of the traffic problems at less cost.

But Caltrans argued that the real bottleneck is up by Ocean Avenue and that a Carmel Valley Road interchange would just put cars on Highway 1 a little faster only to be stopped by the signal light. Traffic would then just become backed up again.

"During peak periods, improvements at Carmel Valley Road will do nothing," Jones said.

Mortenson also added that an interchange "looks good on paper" but that retaining walls and condemnation of homes makes the idea prohibitive.

Arnold also voiced concern that Caltrans has not estimated the number of trees that will be destroyed by the freeway. Laumer responded that the figure would be available in time for the EIS public hearing.

And Arnold questioned whether Caltrans has given any thought to extending the freeway south to Point Lobos — a plan she says is favored by the developers of a proposed hotel across Highway 1 from the state reserve.

Jones said any extension would be part of later plans and would not be part of the current project proposal.

ARNOLD ALSO believes that the freeway would make it easier to develop Carmel Valley and Big Sur.

"We have seen what freeways have done in the southland...in the San Jose area," she said. "We'll be strangled eventually like San Jose is now."

Residents in the audience — there were about a dozen, easily outnumbered 3-1 by the tourists there to see Mayor Clint Eastwood — were evenly divided depending on whether they live on the Hatton Canyon Freeway route or along existing Highway 1.

A city resident, Anne Woolworth, asked that Caltrans keep in consideration that Carmel is a small village and people come to this area for a "leisurely pace."

"There is no need to hurtle ourselves into town at New York or San Francisco speeds," she said.

Donna Marek, representing the local Republican Women's Club, said that organization supports the freeway for three key reasons: commuter traffic safety, emergency vehicle access, and the safety of high school students crossing Highway 1 on their way to the campus.

Another question concerned the availability of federal funds with the budget tightening mood in Washington.

Laumer, although saying he couldn't predict what will happen in the next few years, did say that he is confident the freeway project will be funded.

"Our best guess at this time is we will have the money," Laumer said.

Rev. Juan Oronoz dies at his home in Majorca

A MASS of Christian burial and graveside services took place in Spain for the Rev. Juan Oronoz, chaplain of the Carmelite Monastery in Carmel for the past 23 years.

Fr. Oronoz died May 19 in his sleep at his home in Deya, Majorca, Spain during his annual visit to family and friends. He was 73.

Born Nov. 20, 1912 in Puerto Rico, he attended high schools in Puerto Rico and Spain. He graduated from St. Johns University in Collegeville, Minn., with a bachelor of arts degree in education, and spent a year studying psychology in Palma in Majorca.

For a number of years he worked for Bank of America in Los Angeles and Western Airlines, and served in the U.S. Army Air Corps from 1944 to 1946 as an interpreter.

After his discharge he entered St. Patrick's Seminary in Menlo Park and was ordained to the priesthood on June 16, 1951 in San Francisco by Archbishop John Mitty.

His first assignment was as associate pastor to St. Mary's parish in Stockton. He subsequently served as associate pastor at St. James, San Francisco, Our Lady of Mount Carmel in Carmel Valley, and St. Joseph in Mountain View before coming to the Carmelite Monastery.

During his chaplaincy he traditionally celebrated Mass on the Feast of Our Lady of Guadalupe at the monastery chapel each year in thanksgiving for the cure of a life-threatening disease he contracted during a visit to Europe.

Fr. Oronoz was popular and well regarded in the community and those who worked with him have called him warmhearted and kind.

He leaves no immediate relatives.

The monastery hopes to bring his remains back to Carmel for burial.

access to the telephone, but he made only one call," Nyland said.

Nyland said Archer was given soap and a toothbrush, except when he was moved to another cell following a court appearance and there was a delay in getting the toiletries to Archer.

However, Nyland did admit that the prison was out of toothpaste for several days.

Archer also never complained to authorities about any problems with his water or toilet, Nyland said.

Nyland added that he could not talk about Archer's medical problems because Archer has not signed a release.

Of the contact lenses, Nyland said authorities offered him prison-provided solutions, but Archer refused.

"Obviously he's a chronic complainer," is how Nyland summed up Archer.

Archer says he is a California native, having been born July 5, 1943 in Vallejo. Soon afterward he moved with his mother to Visalia, where they stayed until his father returned from the war.

The family relocated to Santa Cruz when Archer was four and he attended local schools there. He received a degree in accounting with a minor in commercial art from Cabrillo College, Archer said.

Archer said he worked at the former Midtown Market in Soquel at the age of 15, cleaning the butcher's block and doing other odd jobs.

He then worked at several grocery stores, including Albertson's and Lucky's before joining Long's. At one time he worked at a Long's in Salinas, Archer said.

In 1966, Archer married and he and his first wife had two children.

Archer started his own business in 1975, selling burlwood products to stores up and down the coast. In 1982-83 he owned a business selling vending machines.

Archer moved to Carmel in December 1983, he said, but would not elaborate on his past criminal record, including convictions for assault with intent to commit rape, bad checks, escape from jail, robbery, kidnapping and car theft.

His father, Archer said, died April 30, 1982.

Ironically, April 30 was the day Ray Podell was killed.

(Editor's note: This story was pieced together from several different telephone interviews with murder suspect David Archer. The conversations took place May 19-21.)

THIS COULD BE THE MOST COMPREHENSIVE ROADSIDE ASSISTANCE PLAN EVER DEvised.

Beginning May 1st, 1986, the owner of every 1986 Volvo will be covered by a new plan called "On Call."

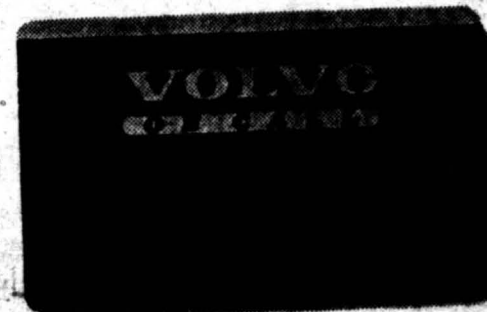

This program is free of charge, and extends for a period of three years. It entitles 1986 Volvo owners to everything from free roadside assistance or towing to reimbursement for food and lodging if an accident or mechanical failure ever hangs them up overnight.

With a car as reliable as a Volvo, you may never have to find out how good these emergency services really are.

Ready to move on Pine Inn

BIG CONFAB on Sunday between the mayor of Carmel, Clint Eastwood, and owners of Pine Inn who came down for the day from Fresno.

The question on the table was whether Pine Inn is seriously interested in joining with the city for a joint underground parking garage to be developed as part of the Harrison Memorial Library annex.

"They seem very interested," was Clint's reply the next afternoon. Ditto for the city, he says. "I think it's an interesting idea if everybody can get something out of it. If that's true it would be quite practical. It's certainly worth not bypassing a good look at it."

The plan is for the city and Pine Inn to go Dutch on the costs of the parking garage — estimated in 1982 to be a maximum of $700,000. Under the 1982 plan the project would provide 96 parking spaces, of which 47 would be for city use.

Today's city-only parking facility plan would cost Carmel $685,000 for 20 spaces. Even if the 1982 figures were doubled the city would still get 27 more parking spaces for the same amount of money.

Mathematican for all of this will once again be Alan Williams, who did all of the figuring for the 1982 plan. Pine Inn owners have asked him to come up with the numbers for 1986, including parking spaces and estimated costs.

Williams will hardly have time to sharpen his pencil. Clint wants an answer before the June 3 council meeting so that the city can move ahead with the annex plan.

Big question is whether the new Pine Inn owners — after writing a check just a few months ago for about $10 million to buy the place — are willing or able to plunk down some more cash for the parking. The argument could be made that they are able and willing since they are the ones who approached the city, not the other way around.

CLINT THE FARMER

Dousing the rumor fire right away.

That story floating around about Clint owning his own Barnyard are untrue.

At least, that's what Clint says. "Absolutely not," is his firm reply. Clint did say he was approached about five months ago about a deal but it never bore fruit.

Barnyard owner John Waldroup also scotched rumors that Clint had bought the place: "Total unadulterated nonsense."

If you need to know what Barnyard I'm writing about, call a travel agent in Des Moines.

SORRY PAUL

With all of the hoopla over donations to the Carmel Youth Center, a very generous gesture was overlooked in last week's edition.

That oversight was not reporting that Paul Laub has donated $4,000 to the city to start what is called a "Mayor's Youth Fund."

The fund will be earmarked for youth activities in town and can be used at the discretion of the council.

Thanks Paul.

A MARATHON SUGGESTION

Perhaps those in Big Sur opposed to the continuance of the otherwise popular Big Sur marathon can be appeased.

A suggestion I have is that an agreement be worked out whereby a substantial amount of net proceeds is donated to Big Sur causes, such as the chamber of commerce, fire brigade, school and library.

That way, those who suffer the most — Big Sur residents and merchants — will also benefit the most from the charity event.

Anyway, a reminder: big meet at 7 p.m. May 22 in Big Sur Grange Hall. There, Caltrans will take local opinion as it determines whether to allow the race to continue in 1987. A Carmel meeting was held yesterday.

A CITY TAKEOVER

Sentiment at city hall is that the Carmel Youth Center can forget any help if its board of directors sticks to its autonomous demands.

The city — if it will pay for a full-time director and help out with maintenance and insurance costs to the tune of about $80,000 — wants some authority in return.

If not, look for the city to just bide its time and take over the facility when the lease expires in 1989.

TRUSTEE DAVID MARADEI

By today we'll know whether that title is appropriate.

Ex-Councilman David Maradei was one of the applicants for a vacant position on the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education. Selection was scheduled for last night, past our bedtime.

A SNEAK PREVIEW

With all of the excitement over new Mayor Clint Eastwood, just about everyone has forgotten that it's also budget time for the city of Carmel.

Look for the budget to be presented in early June with a couple of study sessions thrown in to nitpick over the facts and figures.

Fiscal conservative Clint will be happy to know that the 1986-87 city budget will not increase a penny over this year's expenditures. It will remain at about $5.9 million.

One expected battle will be over the 10 percent motel tax, originally raised from 8 percent to pay for the beach rehabilitation project.

Employee salaries will not be an issue this year. The staff is in its last year of a two-year contract that grants workers a 2 percent pay hike for 1986-87.

To maintain the 0 percent increase, departmental budgets citywide will be trimmed.

A PROUD COUNTY

The county — after finally deciding to crack down on illegal bed and breakfast places within the Carmel Area Land Use Plan — apparently has decided to do a little crowing.

In the mail this week is a press release trumpeting the fact that Dr. Gene Englund pleaded no contest to a charge of illegally operating a bed and breakfast inn in Carmel. He was fined $8,000 in back motel taxes and placed on two years probation.

UPDATE TIME

Mission Ranch, senior housing and Sunset Center parking are three updates worth reporting.

Somewhat coy is the new mayor when it comes to buying Mission Ranch, one of the big issues leading to his decision to run. Clint's put negotiations on hold, while he works on his own plan. No details have been revealed.

On senior housing, the county housing authority rejected a compromise $771,048 bid for the Dolores Street project. Choices for the city include adding density, abandoning the project or going with the Carmel Foundation.

Meanwhile, the site is being used for parking. No discussion on creating parking in the residential zone, an obvious slight to the general plan. Argument is this is just a temporary move. Okay, accepted. Staffers spent four hours with counterparts from the Coastal Commission ensuring the move was on the up and up.

But, a permanent lot probably requires an amendment to the general plan and permits from the Coastal Commission.

If the council wants to proceed with senior housing there, look for another overture to the Carmel Foundation to run the facility and expect an increase in density of more than the proposed 15 units. June 3 is decision day on this one.

What seemed like the only matter not on the May 6 agenda — Sunset Center parking — also is on hold until the consultants finish a comprehensive traffic analysis.

Clint didn't appreciate spending $50,000 for the master environmental assessment study. However, he reasons that as long as the funds have been spent by the former council, he might as well ride it out.

"We're waiting for that (the report) to get our money's worth," he said.

Planners to consider new ice cream ordinance

By NANCY HILLS

ICE CREAM cones could get a special designation from the Carmel Planning Commission at its Wednesday, May 28 meeting at city hall.

That's when a new ordinance prepared by city planning staff for ice cream parlors will be reviewed by the planning commission. If the planning commission approves the ordinance, The city council will consider it at its June 3 meeting.

The ordinance, according to Planning Director Diane White, makes eating places that serve "primarily frozen desserts" a special category of the code that regulates restaurants.

The planning commission last month requested that the city council pass a resolution to rewrite the ordinance because the current code makes it difficult to grant use permits for ice cream parlors. The city council passed the resolution May 6 and sent it back to the planning commission to develop the changes.

Last year the commission had denied a use permit for an ice cream parlor and recommended prohibiting the sale of ice cream cones on the application. The denial and prohibition drew national attention to Carmel. The denial of ice cream parlors and cones became a subject of controversy during the recent city election.

The new code changes, White said, include:

- Retaining the current requirement for two restrooms.
- Ice cream parlors not be formula, drive-in or walk-up.
- All food consumed off premises must be in covered containers — with the exception of ice cream cones.
- The eating place must be a minimum of 600 sq. ft. and 60 percent of the space must be devoted to customer seating.

- It must be managed in such a way as to encourage food consumption on the premises.

- Service would have to be located so lines do not form on the public right-of-way.

In the same meeting, the commission will also review an application by Michael and Carol Montana for an ice cream parlor to replace Wishart's Bakery on Ocean Avenue between San Carlos and Mission. The parlor will provide customer seating and two restrooms as the code requires.

The commission will also hear another continued application for an ice cream store on San Carlos Street near Ocean Avenue in the current location of the Carmel Barber-shop. The application was filed by William Lawson, owner of the now-closed Swensen's Ice Cream Parlor on Ocean Avenue. It closed last year when the lease was not renewed. It was at the time the only ice cream-only store in Carmel. Lawson said he has been looking for a new space to reopen an ice cream store since Swensen's closed.

The new store, Lawson said, would not be Swensen's or part of a chain. However, it would be completely takeout because the location is too small to provide seating. It also has only one restroom.

The commission will also conduct a public hearing on the environmental impact report (EIR) for the proposed Carmel Beach walkway.

The hearing had been originally scheduled for May 21, but was postponed for a week.

The commission is to choose whether it wants to recommend that the city council certify the EIR as adequately addressing the impacts of the project.

If commissioners agree, then the EIR

WISHART'S BAKERY on Ocean Avenue between San Carlos and Mission may become an ice cream parlor if Michael and Carol Montana's application is approved by the ci-

would be presented to the city council at its June 3 meeting.

Although the EIR covers the entire Carmel Beach rehabilitation project — including landscaping — the focal point is the walkway from Eighth Avenue to the south city limits on the west side of Scenic Road. One of the primary issues is the potential loss of 77 parking spaces on Scenic Road to make room for the walkway.

In other action, commissioners will review the city's proposed capital improvements project program to ensure that it is in conformance with the goals and policies of the general plan.

The proposed programs included in the capital improvements project budget for 1986-87 and approximate costs are:

- Piccadilly Park restrooms budgeted for $75,000.

- Phase two of the Carmel Beach Rehabilitation Project, which is budgeted for $375,000. Only a portion of the cost is budgeted for this coming fiscal year because the project is still to be approved by the council and some of the costs can be carried over to 1987-88.

- Devendorf Park restrooms budgeted at $100,000, of which $70,000 is carry over from the 1985-86 fiscal year since the project was not completed.

- New lighting ballasts or replacement of worn fixtures in all city buildings budgeted at $57,700.

- New civic center (police and public works buildings) air circulation system budgeted at $100,000. The existing system is outdated and must be replaced by federal mandate.

Carmel Police offers info on Neighborhood Watch

CARMEL POLICE took their case to the public last week, hoping that a little public relations would make citizens more aware of police activities and crime prevention methods.

Officers were out in front of the post office for a few days recently distributing literature and providing citizens with information about security systems.

It was all part of a series of observances for police statewide, including Neighborhood Watch Month declared by Gov. George Deukmejian. President Ronald Reagan also designated May 11-17 as National Police Week and May 15 as Peace Officers Memorial Day.

As part of the activities, Carmel police will sponsor a special informational session on the Neighborhood Watch Program from 1 to 3 p.m. Sunday, May 25 in the Babcock Room at Sunset Center.

Neighborhood Watch is one of the programs offered by Carmel police for residents.

Another important activity is the House Watch Service. Homes within the city limits will be checked daily for those who will be out of town. The fee is $3 per day.

The vial of life is another program. Residents place vital information about themselves in a small vial inside the refrigerator. A sticker is then placed in a conspicuous location so in an emergency police know where to look for vital information.

Police also offer home security checks for those who want to make their residences safer.

Residents and merchants can also learn more about the local police department through its annual report, which is available at Harrison Memorial Library.

Merchants also have several programs available, including:

- A business security check where, when time and manpower permits, officers will routinely check buildings in the business district to ensure that doors and windows have been locked.

- A silent burglar alarm connection directly to the police station.

- A merchants alert system where police alert businesses about potential shoplifters, credit card frauds, bad checks and counterfeit currency.

For more information, contact the Carmel Police Department at 624-6403.

Planners approve office/apartment project

By NANCY HILLS

THE CARMEL Planning Commission on May 14 approved a master use permit and waived requiring an environmental impact report for development of the Grunion Run restaurant property on Fourth Avenue. It also voted in Commissioner Sandy Swain as this year's chairman.

In addition, the commission approved a final design review for a four-apartment second-story addition to the Walter White building on Dolores Street, granted two clothing store use permits, denied Paul Laub's request for four sliding glass doors on his Paradise Building on Ocean Avenue and approved design plans for two home remodeling projects.

A use permit application by Michael and Carol Montana for an ice cream parlor in the present location of Wishart's Bakery was continued until May 28.

City Atty. Don Freeman told the commission he had been informed by the property owner's attorney, Carmel Martin, that litigation between Frank Garnero, Wishart's owner, and Richard Pepe, who had attempted to purchase the bakery last year, had held up the sale of the bakery to the Montanas. Now, the only person allowed to operate a business on the property is Garnero, Freeman said Martin had told him.

Swain was voted in for the fourth time as planning commission chairwoman after Planning Director Diane White opened the annual meeting. Swain replaced Gene Cava who served as chairman for the past year. The nomination by Commissioner Marjorie Montelius and seconded by Thomas Nash came after several minutes of silence from the commissioners when White called for nominations.

From the audience, newly appointed Commissioner Bruce Roberts, who will be sworn in in June, jokingly offered to volunteer for the post, but no one on the commission responded to the suggestion.

DURING THE regular meeting, the commission unanimously approved demolition of The Grunion Run restaurant and one cottage, waived requiring an EIR on the development of the 16,000 sq. ft. site on Fourth Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets and granted the project a master use permit.

The permit sets the maximum allowed development on the site.

The property was recently acquired by Carmel attorney Robert D'Isidoro. D'Isidoro has submitted preliminary plans to the city by architect Dennis Hodgins for a development consisting of three office/apartment buildings and a 34-space underground parking garage.

The buildings are designed to be one story on San Carlos Street and increase to two story on Mission Street. The first floors are planned as 10,600 sq. ft. of office space and the second floor as nine residential apartments.

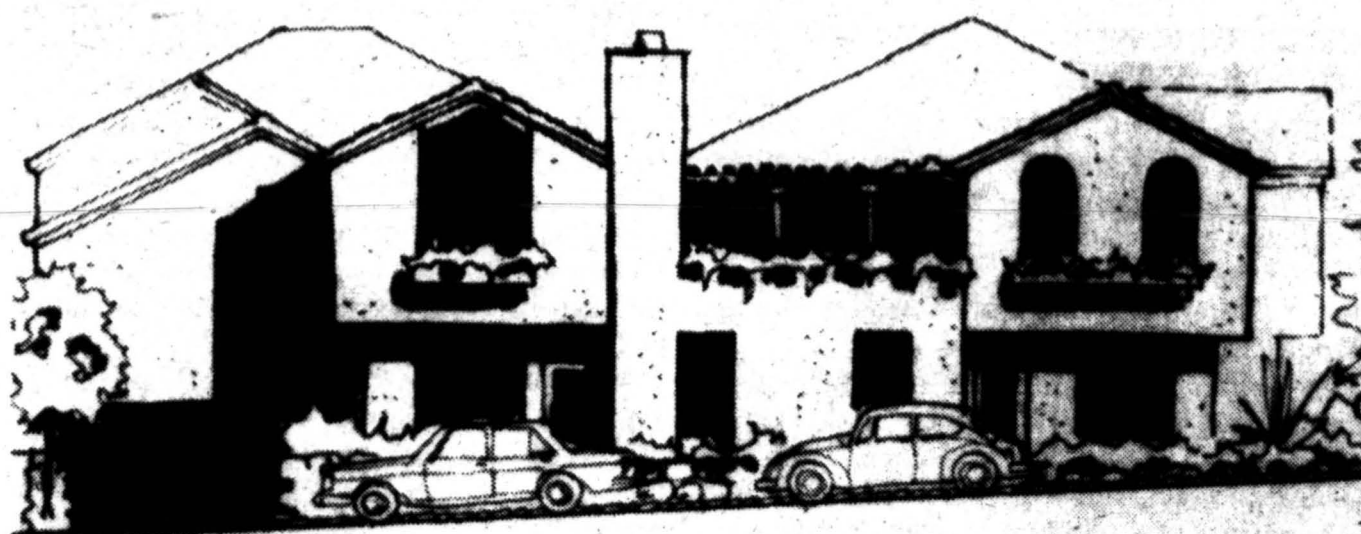

D'Isidoro told the commission that he had experienced "nothing but good cooperation from your staff" and that he had "tried to do something within the general plan of Carmel."

"We have been trying to break up the mass using various levels, colors and textures."

He presented the commissioners with pictures of courtyards and "discovery passageways" in Carmel he said he would like to try to incorporate into the project.

The property had been a part of the Doud estate and had been a subject of concern for the city government in the past few years after the business located there, Village Electric, was replaced by a restaurant. The restaurant use was abandoned in 1984 when an increase in seating was denied due to water usage.

City rezoning placed the property in the Residential and Limited Commercial district.

MISSION STREET elevation for a proposed apartment/office complex at the site of the former Grunion Run restaurant is shown in this artist's rendition. The master use permit was approved for the site by the planning commission.

Restaurants and retail stores are not permitted uses in the RC district and the business could not be reopened as an eating place or converted into shops.

In 1985, Sam Garzone applied to build 12 condominiums on the site, but abandoned the project when the city required him to submit an EIR. The city council also considered buying the property for use as a parking lot but eventually voted against the idea.

The commissioners decided not to require an EIR after city staff informed them that the development of The Grunion Run property on Fourth Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets had been included in an overall city EIR currently being compiled. The report, which according to Planning Director Diane White includes the effect of 21 projects in town, is scheduled to be completed later this year. (Garzone had dropped his plans for the site before the city EIR was commissioned.)

The master use permit approved by the commission for the property allows a maximum of 10,600 sq. ft. actual leasable space on the first floor, 9,230 sq. ft. on the second and an underground garage with 34 parking spaces.

It includes requirements for walkways, 70 percent drought tolerant landscaping, setbacks, public benches, 10 marked on-street parking stalls, protection for existing significant trees, mini-parks and disallows retail usage.

It also mandates that the design "shall incorporate variations in color, materials, building forms, and architectural styles to avoid the appearance of repetitious or monotonous architectural features."

The only significant objection to the project came from Swain who told D'Isidoro that she wished she could turn the project over and have more residential square footage than commercial. Montelius also expressed concern about the mass and setbacks.

Assistant Planning Director Brian Roseth explained to the commission that a master use permit only designates the maximum allowed usage of a site. Details on how that maximum could be used could be dealt with during the design review phase.

Saying that it was an "excellent project," Nash made a motion to approve of the master use permit on the condition its activation was dependent on the approval of the design review. The commission voted unanimously to grant the permit.

The demolition of the two buildings on the property, The Grunion Run restaurant and a cottage, was also unanimously approved. Planning Director White told the commission that no historical or architectural significance of the buildings could be found in city records.

CARMEL BUSINESSMAN Paul Laub's application did not have the same success.

Laub proposed replacing three plate glass windows on the Dolores Street side of his mini-mall Paradise Building with four sliding glass doors. The building, on the northeast corner of Ocean Avenue and Dolores Street, is right on the property line so doors that swing out would encroach on the public right-of-way.

The building is of some architectural significance, according to the staff report, because it is the only structure of an art nouveau style in town, though it has been remodeled "several times" since its construction in 1938.

Laub told the commission that he wanted the doors to increase fire exits, relieve congestion at the Ocean Avenue entrance and help the flow of traffic through the building.

White had told the commissioners that legally there were adequate fire exits in the building already.

When more than one commissioner inquired of Laub why he wanted four exits, he said he would be happy with two, but he had applied for four because it looked more balanced.

"I did it for you," he told the commission.

When Commissioner Ken White said he would like to continue the application so he could visit the site and Laub could perhaps look into other plans, Laub said he appreciated his interest, but "I don't appreciate another month delay."

He could not submit another plan because there were no alternatives, he added.

When questioned by commissioners about the doors opening into individual shops within the mall, Laub said that they would. He also accused an unnamed staff member of rudeness, but was told by Swain that he was out of line and it was inappropriate to discuss that then. She suggested he write to the proper authorities.

Commissioner White added he thought that it looked like traffic was going to be moved from a large sidewalk on Ocean Avenue to a much smaller sidewalk on Dolores Street and Chairman Gene Cava expressed concern about changing a unique building in town. Swain also said she was "uncomfortable" with the doors.

Nash said the application was "way out of line with characterization of the village, gross commercialization, and against the policies of the general plan for mini-boutiques."

"I would like to skip any problems of resubmittal and make a motion to deny," he added. "Just like Mr. Laub works so hard with us in mind, I do it with Laub in mind. I did it all for Laub" so he would not have to resubmit his application.

The motion to deny carried unanimously.

PLANS FOR adding a second story to the Walter White building on Dolores Street near Eighth Avenue received final design approval from the commission. The second story will consist of four apartments, including one 420 sq. ft. studio apartment designated for moderate income housing. The other three at 826 sq. ft., 733 sq. ft. and 677 sq. ft. are planned as one-bedroom units. The design, by architect Daryl Hawkins, incorporates a remodel of the commercial spaces on the first floor.

A second-story parapet wall above the Village Market and facing onto Eighth Avenue was redesigned at the commission's request to be recessed, shingled and finished in stucco to alleviate its visual impact. Access to four parking spaces on the alley behind the building was also increased.

Assistant Planner Nan Roth praised Hawkins' cooperation and response in dealing with the city's concerns.

The design review was unanimously approved.

IN OTHER business, the commission:

- Approved an apparel shop in the Paradise Building. Owner Steve Chao said the store would carry primarily leather goods. Montelius questioned whether or not the shop would offer a unique service to Carmel.

- Approved a Danish sweater shop in The Mall on San Carlos Street next to Jack London's. Montelius asked the commission how many sweater shops already existed in town and whether this one would also be unique. Shop owner Henriette Walker told her that the shop would carry only Danish sweaters and had been told by many people that they had not seen the same type of sweaters in Carmel.

Legion Post 512 honors flag flyers

THERE'S STILL time to honor patriotic citizens who fly the American flag every day; they will be honored next month by the local chapter of the American Legion.

Carmel American Legion Post 512 will honor citizens, businesses and organizations who fly the flag daily. Flag citations will be awarded at a ceremony scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Flag Day, Saturday, June 14 at the Carmel Legion Hall, Dolores Street near Eighth Avenue.

To be eligible for a citation a person must fly the flag daily at his home, business or organization in Carmel, lower and upper Carmel Valley, Pebble Beach, and south of Carmel, including the Big Sur area.

The city of Pacific Grove does not have an American Legion post, so the Carmel chapter has invited residences, businesses and organizations in that city to participate in the program.

This is the fourth time the local chapter has sponsored the program. Members of the community can also nominate others who express their patriotism by displaying the flag, according to Paul Artellan, flag display chairman.

Nominations can be made in writing to: Carmel American Legion Post No. 512, P.O. Box 512, Carmel 93921.

Project 2000 committee seeks community input

By MICHAEL GARDNER

PROJECT 2000 — that lengthy and ambitious program to develop a public school curriculum for 21st Century Carmel Unified School District students — has begun to once again be the focal point of long-range planning after being adrift during the controversial 1984-85 school year.

The Project 2000 committee early next month is expected to put the final touches to a pair of proposals at the high school level which then will be presented to the school board for approval.

The committee will meet at 4 p.m. Wednesday, June 4 in the Carmel High School library.

But Karl Pallastri, chairman of the committee and assistant principal of Carmel Middle School, doesn't want to see just the same old faces at that meeting.

He is pushing for more involvement from parents and the general community since Project 2000 is expected to be the guide for developing programs that will serve the needs of students in the years to come.

"There needs to be a whole lot more community involvement in this," Pallastri said.

"Project 2000 has to be a community project. I feel the level of community involvement has dropped off. My fear is that we will lose the input of the community."

The committee will discuss several different proposals that have been developed by sub-groups, including a pair of programs at the high school level.

The alternative education subcommittee will review its proposals to offer a special core program for ninth-graders and an independent study course for juniors and seniors.

According to Pallastri, the ninth-grade core proposal calls for a self-contained program for freshmen who "are not yet ready for full departmentalization."

The state offers $400 extra per student for this kind of extra program, he said.

Another program proposed is called "wise wish" where juniors and seniors in good standing can contract for independent studies in English or history in lieu of a regular class. Students would be able to earn up to five units of credit, Pallastri said.

Members of the alternative education committee are Jack Ellena, Vic Selby, Peter Lyon and Lynn Archer.

Another sub-group, this one on latchkey programs, will present a proposal to the full committee.

the problems of finding qualified, experienced teachers for the Carmel district.

Pallastri pointed out that new teachers earn about $17,000 to $18,000 annually. "Can they come to Carmel and provide excellence and find a place to live on that kind of money? That's a real serious problem."

The question is how the district can attract top professionals in a high-cost area with the small salaries, he said.

A fourth subcommittee, this one on curriculum, will report on its latest discussions. The subcommittee consists of Rosemary Montgomery, Madeline Van Zander and Amelia Franke.

The subcommittee is studying ways to provide a better integrated curriculum for all grades since what is required by the high school affects the middle school and what the middle school is focusing on affects the elementary schools, Pallastri said.

Another proposal studied by this subcommittee is whether to expand the core program for sixth-graders and offer a core program for seventh-graders to assist in the transition from elementary school.

HOW TO attract top young teachers to the high-cost Carmel Unified School District is one of the dilemmas being studied by the Project 2000 committee. Above is speech therapist Barbara Weingarten and River School teacher Steve Taylor previewing the latest in computer software during a special showing recently. (Holy McFarland photo.)

THE SUBCOMMITTEE will propose that the school district work with the Carmel Youth Center and city of Carmel on after-school programs for middle school students.

Currently, nearly one-half of middle school students are children of working parents or come from a single-parent family, Pallastri said.

"We have the facilities but we don't have the money to operate the program," he said.

By offering after-school programs students would have a safe, supervised place to go until their parents come home from work, Pallastri added.

Members of the latchkey subcommittee are Harriette Rowntree and Kathy Nicholson.

Another problem that particularly affects the high school also will be discussed by the Project 2000 committee.

The recruitment action group of Vance Baldwin, Chuck Phillips and Bob Douglas will report on their discussions concerning

Message reaches students; Prom Night '86 a success

By MICHAEL GARDNER

PERHAPS "Friday Night Live" had something to do with it and maybe not. But the truth is that there are no Carmel High School students in the hospital this week following Prom Night, May 17.

With Prom Night 1985 still a recent memory — two students were seriously injured in an accident that is suspected to have been caused by alcohol abuse — Carmel High School students were presented with a special program called Friday Night Live May 15.

Principal Joe Feldeisen got right to the point with his opening remarks by saying, "Last year at this time I had to go to the hospital two different times...To see that young girl — the condition she was in. I made up my mind to do everything I could to have the student body informed about drugs and alcohol and the automobile."

Feldeisen told the students that he too had the attitude that accidents only happen to others.

"Mine was just like yours 20 years ago — that's not going to happen to me. I won't be involved. I think these (the injured students) had the same mentality," the principal said.

The program, Feldeisen said, will be a success "if we can reach one or two of you. Then I would feel this has been success."

Jim Kooler, a member of the Alcoholism Council of Contra Costa County, introduced a video with a rock music score that put students through a drunken driving arrest, including taking a sobriety test and undergoing police questioning.

Another follow-up episode in the video told the story of a teenager who was badly scarred in an accident caused by her boyfriend's drunken driving.

Both episodes were true accounts.

Pacific Grove Police Officer Craig Moser told the students that he has a deal with his teenage son. The deal is that the son will call if he or the driver of a car has had too much to drink.

Moser then asked how many students believe their parents would be angry if they called home for a ride after an evening of drinking and partying. Most of the students raised their hands.

But Moser pointed out that "it's best to be mad than mourn."

volunteer students driving home those who call and ask for a free and confidential ride. The program involves five local high schools and 116 volunteer students in the area, she said.

Asking what the number is, Meyers received a chorus of replies, "625-HELP."

Dave Purvis, a city of Monterey juvenile officer, pointed out that nationwide alcohol caused 5,000 teenage deaths last year.

"Let's bring it home," Purvis said as he counted out eight deaths and 102 injuries in Monterey County because of alcohol.

But it was not all bad news from Purvis. He told students that Saturday, May 10 four area high schools celebrated with proms. There was not one single injury accident involving students and alcohol that weekend.

"For that, I applaud you," Purvis said.

Purvis reiterated that the program is not too preach about drinking.

"We're not going to tell you not to drink, not to drive. The choice is yours. All we want to do is make you aware," he said.

Three students also spoke to the crowd.

Maile Smith recalled last year's prom night tragedy. "These people are going to have scars for the rest of their lives."

Smith told students that there are alternatives to getting in a car with someone who has had too much to drink. "I did once...I was pretty scared."

Instead, Smith advised that students determine one of their party to be the designated driver who will not drink that night.

"You'll all feel a lot better in the morning," she said.

Kendall Fike told students that two of her friends from Arizona were just involved in a horrible crash right after their prom.

"He drove them both right off the mountain. I can't believe that," she said, trying to maintain her composure.

"No one ever believes it will happen to them," Fike continued. She offered the advice, "Just be careful and watch out for the other guy who might be out there drinking and driving too."

Gil Champion also outlined his contract program where students sign an agreement with their parents. The contract stipulates that the student who has had too much to drink or whose driver is inebriated will call home for a ride and the parents will not punish him or her.

Correction

Will Shaw was mistakenly identified as being a representative of the Big Sur Land Trust in a story last week about a panel discussion on Sen. Pete Wilson's proposed legislation to federalize Big Sur.

Although Shaw is a member of the land trust he was not representing that organization during the panel discussion.

We regret any inconvenience the error may have caused.

"I CAN'T STAND up here and tell you not to drink. You're parents can't," Moser said.

However, he did ask students that "if you're going to drink, have some common sense. If you're going to drink, know when you've had too much. Be realistic."

Monterey County Sheriff's Deputy Ray George was a little more blunt with the students. "Each year I look back and see one or two people killed. Look around. Is it going to be someone here? Take a couple of seconds to think about it. It's your life."

An alternative to driving drunk or getting into a car with someone who is inebriated is to call Safe Rides, explained parent Dee Meyers.

Safe Rides now operates out of a room at Community Hospital. The program, offered on Friday and Saturday nights, involves

Tradition's end

ANOTHER TRADITION is coming to an end in Carmel.

Virginia Stanton is selling the Normandy Inn on Ocean Avenue and Monte Verde Street. The European country-style motel was designed by her and her award-winning architect husband Robert Stanton in the 1920s. Robert Stanton died in 1983. Their son and part-owner of the inn, Michael Stanton, has been the manager for the past 23 years.

The new owner as of May 31 should be Thomas Sweeney and Max Hosiet. Sweeney also owns the Horizon Inn and Ocean View Lodge on Junipero and Third avenues. Hosiet, he said, is a Sacramento attorney who built the Monterey Inn with Sweeney.

The only changes Sweeney said he is planning for the Normandy is a "refurbishing" of the rooms — 52 of them by the city records.

He purchased the old inn, he said, because the location makes it "one of premier properties in Northern California." Sweeney said he had his eye on the Normandy for some time.

Virginia Stanton said when she first considered selling, she thought "How can I part with this," but found she just "didn't want the responsibility anymore."

Newcomers to the peninsula — such as myself — might not even know that Stanton owned the Normandy Inn, but recognize her name from the many charities she is involved with. She also is known as one of the finest hostesses on the peninsula, from what I hear. After years as the party editor for House Beautiful, she probably can put on quite a bash.

Stanton said the sale doesn't mean she's moving away from the area or her well-known home in Carmel Valley designed by her husband.

"I love it here. I would never leave," she said.

And it was a love at first sight. Stanton said when she first came here in 1924 with her husband to visit, she said to herself "This is where I'm going to live."

She just didn't realize that it would be the next year she would move to Carmel.

Though Virginia and Michael debated on the actual dates the motel was started, she maintained it was in the late 1920s, perhaps in 1928.

She and Robert originally bought the Monte Verde Inn then located where the Normandy is now, she said. After a couple of years, they moved it to its present location on Monte Verde Street, sold it, and started the Normandy.

"We so loved Carmel that we wanted to keep it (the Normandy) European. No modern buildings at all," she said.

The original buildings included what now is Rittmasters on the corner of Monte Verde Street and Ocean Avenue. It was then a dining room for the motel. There were 10 rooms to start with and the cottages came later, she explained.

"We made the rooms like we would want to stay in them ourselves," she said.

Stanton observed that Carmel has changed a lot since she and Robert first moved here.

"It's growing up awfully fast but it's so good that people enjoy it. I hope they love it as much as us oldtimers do."

Once the inn is sold, Stanton will probably have more time to spend on her favorite charities such as the Salvation Army and Guide Dogs for the Blind.

A favorite dream of hers, she said, is to raise money for an auditorium at Sunset Center. The building is planned for the lower parking lot where the bungalows are located on 10th Avenue.

It is a shame, she said, that many fine events cannot come to Carmel because the present auditorium at Sunset Center is too small.

"I would like to leave a cultural heritage to Carmel," Stanton said.

The building has already been designed, she said, by her husband before his death. He was also the designer for the King City auditorium and the Monterey County Courthouse.

Talking to Virginia Stanton is a lot of fun, I can tell you. She has some great memories. She married her husband three weeks after their first date. (I've always heard that's a no-no.) It was a very happy marriage, she added. She worked with her husband as an interior designer and selected colors for his buildings.

In fact, colors and paint was the way she met him in college. He was putting together a dance. He asked if anyone knew how to mix paint and she was the only one who responded. Great romances, I've noticed, usually start with some very practical beginnings.

Stanton also wrote recipe books and food articles for national magazines because her cooking was so unusual, particularly for the time.

No one had ever taught her how to cook, Stanton said, so

she said she just made it up as she went along. (I can relate to that.)

She authored a book called Successful Entertaining in the mid-'60s which she said is now a collector's item.

As for Michael Stanton, who is also selling his interest in the motel, he said he was going to travel and think about what he wants to do. Something else I can relate to.

BIZ INFO

Sorry, but I'm in big hurry, so here are some tidbits of business information. Most of these will show up again...I printed the wrong name for Linda Redding's new shop opening in June in The Mall on San Carlos Street. I named it Carmel Country Store. Not so. It's going to be Carmel Country Home...Kathleen Cardinali of Left Bank Cafe in Carmel Plaza is still looking for a place to move to June 1. The Plaza has asked the cafe to leave by then and there are lawsuits and all that good stuff flying around. She has put in a use permit application to relocate the Left Bank at Wishart's Bakery on Ocean Avenue just in case Carol and Michael Montana's application for an ice cream parlor there doesn't work out...The Peppercorn has applied to the city to put a store into the Plaza. Where? The Left Bank spot and a portion of the Harbinger Restaurant. The planning commission has determined the new store requires a use permit, so it will be coming up for city review. The store "will be very much a pick-up on what Bob Brown was doing at Byron & Schiller," according to owner Donald Seydel. That was a "really unique mix of contemporary homewares," he explained. The Plaza was the location of Seydel's first business, a restaurant in 1970 called DG's. In 1972, he opened The Peppercorn, a traditional pots and pan store on Dolores Street, now closed. He then purchased a kitchenware shop on Ocean Avenue, which he called Peppercorn II. It offers contemporary kitchenware and is still there in the Doud Arcade. It will stay in business, Seydel said, even after the new Plaza store. When the new store opens depends on the permit process, he said, but he is aiming for July. All these Peppercorns are not to be confused with The Peppercorn in the Barnyard which Seydel also owns...Word is that Brentanno's Bookstore filed applications to the city on May 16 for use permits, business license and other items the city requires. Brentanno's will take the former Books, Inc. location in the Plaza if all works out. Or so I understand.

Two numbers needed for operator calls

There are now two numbers to dial for some operator assistance services, Pacific Bell reminds Monterey County residents.

"When customers dial '0,' they will reach a Pacific Bell operator who can place calls within a Pacific Bell service area," said Jim Bower, area manager for Pacific Bell. "But when customers need a long distance operator, they will dial '00.' If their long distance company doesn't offer operator assistance, they will be given further instructions when they dial '00.'"

The change became effective March 1 through June 30, on a progressive basis throughout the state. The change in Carmel and Carmel Valley became effective in April.

"The change is a result of the breakup of the Bell System two years ago," explained Bower. "With the breakup, Pacific Bell's territory in California was divided into 10 telephone service areas. Pacific Bell is allowed to provide operator assistance only for calls within each service area. Long distance companies provide telephone service for calls which cross service area boundaries."

To help familiarize customers with their service areas, Pacific Bell has been including service area maps in its bills for the last four months.

"The new dialing procedure affects only operator-assisted long distance calls," said Bower. "Therefore, the change will affect relatively few Pacific Bell customers, because most people dial calls directly and don't require operator assistance," he added.

"Customers making collect or calling card calls will continue to dial '0' plus the number they wish, as they always have. The '00' dialing need only be used for calls to the operator, such as to report poor transmission on a long distance call," explained Bower.

"In any case, whenever customers misdial, they will be given instructions on how to dial correctly. No one will be left without instructions on how to complete the call they wish," Bower emphasized.

By providing its own operator services within service areas, Pacific Bell expects to save $23 million in 1986, even with the need for new facilities and equipment, and the return of 2,800 employees from AT&T.

Savings in subsequent years are expected to total $40 million annually. According to Bower, these savings will be figured into Pacific Bell's general rate base, and contribute to keeping the cost of telephone service as low as possible.

New wheels for Red Cross

A NEW mini van now sits in the garage of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Chapter of the American Red Cross thanks to a grant of $3,000 from the Community Foundation of the Monterey Peninsula and matching donations from individuals and businesses. Admiring the new van (specially ordered and purchased from Larry Menke Chrysler Plymouth, Seaside Auto Center), are, from left to right, Doug Despard, special advisor to the chapter; Phil Gray, disaster chairman; and James Heisinger Jr., chapter chairman. More than $11,000 was raised in the three-and-a-half month fund-raising campaign for the 1986 Plymouth Voyager, which will be used as a passenger and transport vehicle for the chapter. "The community response was amazing," Heisinger added. (Mac McDonald photo.)

A big $9,100 for Youth Center

CLINT EASTWOOD campaign T-shirts, buttons and just plain goodwill helped stash another $9,100 into the coffers of the financially-strapped Carmel Youth Center recently. The money will be banked until next fall to help start up new programs. Eastwood has been allowing merchants to profit from his election as long as they donate some proceeds to the youth center. Shirt sales from Red Rooster in the Barnyard netted $5,000, Rotary gave $2,000 and Bud Allen presented $2,100 netted from the sale of buttons. At a check presentation ceremony (above) were: (from left) Tom Lawler, owner of Red Rooster; Carole Colter, youth center supervisor; Bud Allen, owner of It's Bud's Pub; Merv Sutton, youth center director; Clint Eastwood, Carmel mayor; Ron Faia, youth center president; and Chris Spaulding, Rotary president. All seven Olympic yachting classes, Finn, Flying Dutchman, 470 (men and women), Soling, Star, Tornado, and Sailboard (men and women) will be represented at the Goodwill Games regatta to be sailed on the Bay of Tallinn, northwest of Moscow, across from the Gulf of Finland.

AIR FORCE MAJOR GENERAL TO ADDRESS DEMOCRATIC WOMEN'S CLUB

Retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Jack Kidd will be the guest speaker at the Democratic Women's Club meeting Thursday, May 22, from 2 to 4 p.m. at The Crossroads Community Room.

Kidd's topic will be the nuclear dilemma we face, particularly in light of the Chernobyl disaster. Also speaking will be Torivio Ortega and Miguel Hernandez, the only Democrats running for judicial seats in Monterey County.

Since retiring from the Air Force in 1974, Kidd has been lecturing about the nuclear dilemma. In 1984, he founded Bridges Worldwide, a non-profit, non-political, tax-exempt corporation whose aim is to "build people-to-people bridges." He originated the Star Light strategy, an alternative to the arms race and Star Wars.

Ortega is vying for the Monterey County Municipal Court seat in King City in an open race, and Miguel Hernandez is challenging Judge Steve Sillman for the municipal court seat in Salinas. The two candidates will speak for five minutes each commencing at 2:20 p.m.; Kidd will begin his presentation at 2:30 p.m.

The meeting is open to the public. For more information, call Helen Hempel at 649-4141.

You Have to Get Up Early to Catch an Alcoholic Sober

But that's what we'll do at Brightside Act Center if it starts him on the road to recovery.

It's part of a new process called "intervention," that almost always persuades an alcohol or drug abuser to seek treatment. Here's how it works:

Our intervention specialist will prepare the individual's family, friends, co-workers, and even his or her employer to conduct the intervention.

Then, led by the specialist and aided by the element of surprise, the group will confront the individual about his or her problem.

Interventions usually take place in the subject's own home and at whatever time is necessary to catch him or her at an unguarded moment.

Now, you can learn more about intervention and how it can help you help someone you care about by attending an intervention class at Brightside Act Center.

Classes are taught by Ed Storti and Brightside Act Center staff who have conducted more than 2,000 successful interventions over the past 11 years. He or the Brightside staff will answer your questions and direct an intervention for you if you need one.

5:00 A.M.

If you know of someone you would like to give the gift of sobriety, intervention is something you should consider. You can only fail if you fail to intervene.

C.V. ROTARY HONORS TOP 100 AT C.H.S.

Each year the Carmel Valley Rotary Club honors the top 100 students at Carmel High School. This year's event will be Wednesday, May 28, at 6:30 p.m. at the Carmel Mission Inn.

The featured speaker for this year's "Top 100 Dinner" will be Dr. Ingrid Rimland, a person whose life's struggles, determination and achievements are exceeded by few. Rimland is a noted author whose story is one of "rags to riches."

Author of The Furies and the Flame, which will soon be a made-for-TV movie, Rimland spent her life in the Ukraine and in the remote jungles of Paraguay, where she married and bore a son who was severely brain damaged. Her struggle to help her son and overcome the odds against them became the basis of the autobiographical book. She lives in Stockton, where she is a practicing child psychologist and award-winning author.

New happenings

Quick action by the new city council and Mayor Clint Eastwood makes it possible for visitors to find parking where it once wasn't available — the lot across from the post office, which will be used in due time for a senior citizen's housing project. It makes sense to use it for parking until the project gets underway. All indications have it that this summer will be a big one for the local businesses. Good thinking, council!

Poppy Hills, the new golf addition to the Monterey Peninsula debuts May 26 with a host of press folk partaking of food and golf on opening day. The PR firm of Solem/Loeb & Associates of San Francisco are handling the press.

Opening festivities begin Memorial Day at 10 a.m., Monday, May 26 with special ceremonies and introductions of NCGA officials and course designer Robert Trent Jones Jr. In the heart of the Del Monte Forest, the rolling terrain is a golfer's paradise, surrounded by pine trees and a view of the Pacific Ocean from some locations on the course.

SWING IS THE THING

Traveling on Wings West to Orange County for a few days and at the airport leaving at the same hour were Mr. and Mrs. Ted Balestreri of Restaurants Central. Ted was as dapper as ever.

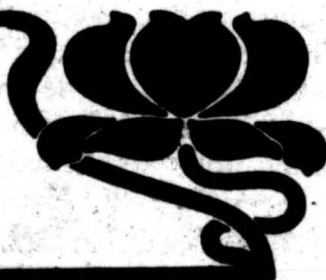

What we learned when we arrived south is that a new dance craze called the "West Coast Swing" (a derivation of the old "Lindy," a dance step familiar to many Easterners a few seasons back) is catching on like wildfire.

I was taken by sisters Ann and Ang to places like Lion d'Or in Downey where they conduct a "Swing Dance" every Wednesday night and where lessons are available. Roma and George Christopherson are the two who hold down the fort at Lion d'Or. Dance lessons are given by Bill Joslin, who has won six awards for his wing dancing.

Another top spot where the folks congregate on a regular basis is the Fox in Fullerton where they feature the Fabulous Fox Music Co. The group runs the gamut from A to Z with pop, rock and some jazz. Alan Rowe is the featured singer and he has fabulous pipes.

The last place we frequented for dancing was The Regency in Downey. The crowd there is somewhat younger and the music more contemporary with the Essex Trio. If you love to dance, better head south, but be sure you can handle the energy level of Smog Angelenos. They go, go, go, all the time. It is nothing for folks to drive 100 miles a day going to La Habra, Hollywood, Fullerton, Downey, etc. And then, get spruced up to go dancing. I'm tired thinking about it! Incidentally, I overheard someone say that the smog in Southern California is educational — it makes your eyes smart!

WATCH THOSE ROCKETS

At this writing, the Rockets of Houston are three games up on the Lakers of Los Angeles and should they win the next one, it is history for the Lakers. Perhaps the Lakers are starting to show their age and should Kareem retire after this season, they'll surely be hurting. The "Twin Towers" of Sampson and Olajuwon are tough on all their opponents. Perhaps the Rockets' regime is thinking dynasty...sure looks it!

CHANGES ARE A COMIN'

ABC will have a new football announcing team come this fall. O.J. Simpson will not return. Frank Gifford takes on a new position, that of color man and the play-by-play chores go to Al Michaels. Michaels has been moving up the ABC ladder since he made that big splash during the Olympics. His style reminds this former broadcaster of Vin Scully, the L.A. Dodger announcer and NBC voice. Both are articulate and knowledgeable about the subject matter.

GRAPHICS GOSSIP

Mark Farina of Carmel and Jan Salerno of Manhattan Beach, both of whom worked on the Spalding Pro-Am Magazine, boasting about new illustrating commissions they have received. Mark is illustrating something for Chevron and Jan designing costumes and sets for Rod Stewart. Mark handled the graphics for the Spalding Magazine and Jan designed the cover. Both are exceptionally talented.

NEW BAND IN TOWN

Word has it that a new band based in Los Angeles has hit the peninsula. "White Silence" is the name and they specialize in dance rock. Look for them soon. They'll have to play areas other than Carmel proper 'cause you know the rules about "live" music in Carmel.

Congratulations to Alex Hubbard, son of Don Hubbard, a local attorney. Alex, who made the U.S. National Rowing Team that participated in competitions in Europe last year, is currently rowing for U.C. Adios....

CARMEL YOUTH BASEBALL

BY MARY WALTER

The heat is on!

The weather has been great at Larson Field, but most of the heat has been coming from the players' bats this week. Come on down and catch the action.

Current Bronco standings: Pine Inn, 7-1; Derek Rayne, 6-2; Carmel Valley Disposal, 2-6; La Playa, 1-7.

Derek Rayne won both their games this week, with a 12-3 win against La Playa May 12 and a cliff-hanging slugfest against Carmel Valley Disposal Saturday. Chad Christensen blasted a three-run homer over the fence for CVD in the second inning to tie the score; Derek Rayne's Lee Walton countered in the fourth inning as he "parked it" for two runs. Other hot bats belonged to Derek Rayne's Damian Griss (5-for-6), Grant Heinrich (3-for-4), and CVD's Brooks Juhring, Alex Stot and Kevin Quinn. The final score: 17-15.

Pine Inn best CVD 5-3 May 13 in another action-packed game. Runs scored by pitcher Sky Feekes (2-for-2), Brooks Juhring and Bryant Pearson gave CVD a 3-2 lead in the fourth, but Pine Inn's leading hitter, Travis Smith (3-for-4), tied the game in the fifth and kept CVD scoreless with his pitching. Centerfielder Brian Sarkin contributed a fine running catch. Ace relief pitcher Clas Brown retired the sides in succession in the last two innings, while teammates Mario Bertolucci and Smith scored the game-winning runs.

Pine Inn's second win of the week came against La Playa on Saturday, 9-4. Jon Bohlman was La Playa's leading hitter with a ground-rule double and RBI and the seventh inning. Danny Higgins, David Palshaw and Mark Brophy pitched for the winners. Travis Smith again led the hitting, 3-for-4.

On the Mustang field, Yates, Downer's 6-5 win against Carmel Realtors May 12 started the week with a well-played, touch-and-go match. Carmel Realtors' Chip Dorey went 3-for-3; Jared Feekes scored the game-winning run.

County Mounties beat Books, Inc., 17-15 on May 13. Leading hitters were Brian Allen and Brandon Maggiore for County Mounties; Daniel Silver and Robbie Koontz (4-for-4) for Books, Inc. Pitcher Justin Koppel held the winner's lead in the final inning.

Carmel Realtors beat Dick Bruhn 9-6 on Saturday.

The final Mustang game this week was Yates, Downer's 11-9 victory over County Mounties. Daniel Brown (3-for-4) joined Brian O'Rourke and Jared Feekes in pitching. Feekes showed that good pitching runs in the family as he (like brother Sky) smoked the opponents with his fastball.

The winner's defense shone brightly as Toby Lauterbach, Chris Morgan and Cooper Scollan proved their fielding skills; the trio also had its share of hits and RBIs. CM's R.B. Morris made a terrific catch in centerfield, while teammates Jesse Houston and Jim Rice were each 3-for-3.

This week's featured Pinto team is Mediterranean Market, with Stiles Bliss, Russell Chaplan, Jeff Harris, Brei Hogan, Sarah Jaster, Todd MacMillan, Amri Masliyah, Matthew Mink, Christopher Spilfogel, David Spilfogel, Hope Strachan and Kevin Yeager.

MILITARY MATTERS

The military services keep us apprised of what's happening on the military front with Carmel and Carmel Valley-area members of the service. The following is a roundup of the latest "Hometown News Service" offerings from the military:

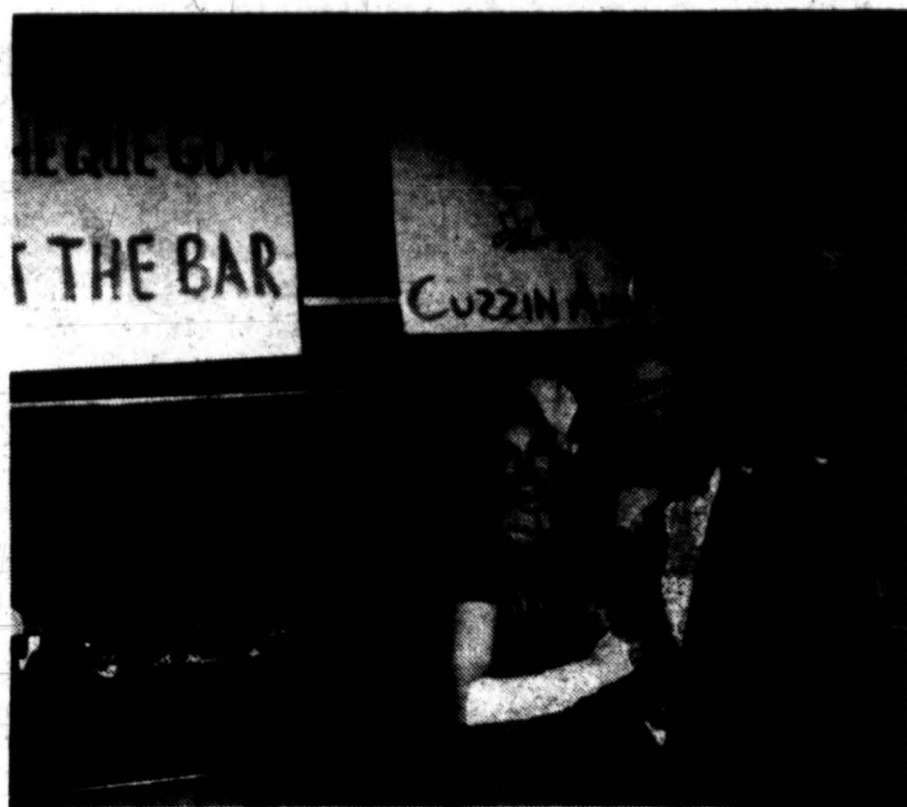

Air Force Staff Sgt. Alan B. Dewey, son of retired Air Force Col. Hartley and Sally Dewey of Carmel, has arrived for duty with the 1912th Information Systems Squadron, Langley Air Force Base, Va.

Dewey, an information systems programming supervisor, is a 1977 graduate of Carmel High School.

Army Pvt. William J. Russell, son of William and Joann Russell of Central City, Iowa, has arrived for duty with the 3rd Armored Division, West Germany.

Russell, a tracked-vehicle mechanic, is a 1980 graduate of Central City Community High School.

His wife Michelle is the daughter of Melvin and Marina Jasper of Carmel.

BELLYING UP to the bar were John and Judy Palshaw at the River School PTA "vittles and fiddles" party at Mission Ranch May 16. (Michael Gardner photo.)

READY FOR some "vittles and fiddles" is Janet Gendelman, president of the Carmel River School PTA. The River School PTA sponsored an authentic western barbecue and barn dance May 16 down at Mission Ranch. The event raised about $3,800 for the PTA. Providing the music were the Coast Ridge Boys and the Good Ol' Boys. The cooks included Supt. Bob Infelise and a few of his pals from Gilroy such as Rich Freedman, current chairman of gourmet alley for the Gilroy Garlic Festival; Sam Bozzo, who formerly held that post; and Doug Burh of Gridley. Hear tell John Kirchenbauer made an excellent sheriff and there were three beautiful gals behind the bar, Linda Perkins, Gyll Irwin and Margaret Van Daulen. (Michael Gardner photo.)

HE AIN'T NO dude, this Tom Mangold, who along with pretty Missus Marianne, enjoyed the "vittles and fiddles" party sponsored by the River School PTA May 16 at Mission Ranch. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Army Pvt. John L. Bassett, son of Ed Bassett of Carmel, and Susan Feldman of Chicago, has arrived for duty with the 3rd Infantry Division, West Germany.

Bassett is an infantryman.

Alexander S. Olow, son of retired Army Lt. Col. John Olow of Carmel, has been promoted in the U.S. Air Force to the rank of staff sergeant.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Legislation in Pennsylvania has established minimum mandatory jail sentences for people convicted of certain crimes against children and senior citizens who, in the words of Governor Richard Thornburgh, are the segments of the population "most vulnerable to heinous crimes, particularly those involving physical violence." Under the law, people under 60 years of age who commit crimes against victims over 60 will face stiff minimum mandatory penalties for such crimes as rape, assault and theft by deception.

Of all things, the button-sized batteries used in the hearing aids of many older people are proving to be an unexpected health hazard to grandchildren and other youngsters. The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that there have been hundreds of injuries, and even deaths, among children who've swallowed such batteries. When young children come to visit you, the commission advises, keep such batteries, as well as other dangerous objects, well of their reach.

Lynn Larson looks to nature for inspiration

By ANNE PAPINEAU

TO THOSE who know her work, it should come as little surprise that Lynn Larson "is not a city person," but one who is, who must — remain in touch with the land.

A bond formed with the outdoors, with nature and the nurturing earth, is as vital to the artist today as it was from first memory.

"The sky, the heavenly canopy I walk under — I'm tremendously inspired by it. It's not something that's incidental," Larson affirmed. She is a woman who even in the dead of winter appears sun-kissed. Her eyes are the clear blue of that "heavenly canopy," her hair turning a soft white like its clouds.

"Skies, vegetables, flowers, the ocean are what centers me. I'm always walking in a beautiful place, being inextricably connected with natural phenomenon."

This sensitivity to color and to nature pervades Larson's works — which encompass a variety of media.

Since 1982 she has designed the annual Bay to Breakers poster that commemorates that colorful San Francisco footrace. Other significant poster commissions by Lynn Larson include those for Museum Editions West, Santa Monica; The Honolulu Marathon (1982-83); The Nature Company, San Francisco; Highlands Inn, Carmel; and The Barnyard, Carmel.

On Saturday, May 24, Larson will attend a reception honoring her first local show of watercolors and paintings in four years. The reception is scheduled 6 to 8 p.m. at First Impressions, Dolores Street and Sixth Avenue, Carmel.

From 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, May 25, Larson will sign the new Bay to Breakers poster as well as a poster executed for an all-women's marathon. This, also, will take place at the Carmel gallery.

Larson makes her home in Carmel Valley "deliberately because of the sun and visual space."

"My earliest memory is of picking a geranium and being startled by pink," the artist recalled. Another interview session summoned memories of "the color orange in nasturtiums. When I was a kid — seven, eight or nine — I'd have to walk through great fields of nasturtiums to school. If I didn't want to go to school, I would hide in a great patch. Nasturtium leaves have a particular coating, and when water is on them they look like glass."

"I'm from the San Pedro area in L.A. I've been a 'valleyite' almost 10 years. I chose Carmel Valley because the vistas give me the quality of space I need. I need a lot of it. I'm not a city dweller although I admire the city; I enjoy all the culture there. The truth is I need a lot of space and uninterrupted time to create."

Larson said she works alone all day, "five, six and seven days a week." Her companions

Contest lauds purveyors of literary rhinestones

"In prelude to her daily vigil Sister Autorella flattened herself against the outer wall of the small, 16th century chapel, moved furtively towards the carved wooden doors and peered cautiously inside, wondering, as also was her custom, if she'd be able to complete at least two stations of the cross before the first of the cathedral tours exploded the solitude so vital for her meditations."

By ANNE PAPINEAU

CREATIVITY GONE bonkers logged T. Holt Sutton her first pinpoint on the world map of literary exploits.

Sutton's paen to Sister Autorella, constructed as the opening sentence to "the worst novel ever written" might be described as a grammatical minefield by her former English teachers at Carmel High School. Convoluted and curious as it is, it earned Sutton a place in the newly published tome, "Son of 'It Was a Dark and Stormy Night.'"

The responsible party, publisher Viking Penguin Inc., seems to cultivate this strain of "noble rot" in its paperback vineyards. Thus "It Was a Dark and Stormy Night" and its new offspring, "Son of..." represent a fecund harvest of dangling participles and mid-stream changes of tense and thought, all contained within the framework of a single sentence.

Before either book there was a contest.

Scott Rice, professor of English at San Jose State University, took a cue from Lord Edward Bulwer-Lytton (1803-1873), renowned whist player and novelist ordinaire.

Bulwer-Lytton gave the world such ringing clichés as "The pen is mightier than the sword" and "the great unwashed," not to mention the novel, "The Last Days of Pompeii."

"It was a dark and stormy night" is a fragment from the opening sentence to Bulwer-Lytton's novel "Paul Clifford" — for those of you who have long attributed the phrase to literary beagle Snoopy.

The English novelist became the inspiration for "a literary sting operation to expose the world's wretchedest writers," a contest that would "turn its spotlight on the seamy underside of literature."

From ignoble beginnings, the Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest now draws some 20,000 entrants a year, each of whom strive to write "the opening sentence to the worst possible hypothetical novel in any genre they choose."

"There's quite a nest of writers down there (the Monterey Peninsula). It's not all Robert Louis Stevenson by any means," Rice told The Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

Rice likened the judging of superiorly bad sentences to "opening oysters and looking for pearls, except its interminable. Usually they represent some violation of taste, sometimes it will be a matter of language, sometimes of content or both. Almost any kind of a meal can be excellent prepared properly. I try not to have any preconceptions."

The grand prize winner — this year it was Patricia E. Presutti of Lewiston, N.Y. — receives an Apple Macintosh 512K computer and MacWrite word processing software.

Presutti's literary rhinestone:

"The bone-chilling scream split the warm summer night in two, the first half being before the scream when it was fairly balmy

C.V. artist Lynn Larson keeps a perceptive eye on nature

while working are the radio and her record collection.

Inspiration for her newest collection of paintings, she explained, comes from her garden and the sky.

"Sometimes my studio spaces have been extremely small, but they've always had large windows. I cannot be closed in. My whole being must be able to soar," Larson said. "Sky

'I was so taken by the beauty of the forms, the shapes, the dew on the vegetables. I know that somewhere in those victory gardens, my whole being was being nourished.'

phenomenon is very important to me — layers of pattern, of color shifting — the shadows the clouds cast on the land — how they change the color of the foliage."

The changing moods of the sky may prompt Larson to sketch a series of pastels. She has pursued art for about two decades, working at first in serigraph or silkscreen.

"I've only called myself an artist since I was 48," she noted. "I'm now 53."

At Immaculate Heart College in Hollywood, Larson majored in art and education. For some years she was an educator, and even in that capacity she managed to work the arts into the curriculum she devised.

Larson credits "two thunderbolts," Marc Chagall and Corita Kent, for "releasing me to be the artist I could be."

"I took art simply as a pleasure, because I didn't know one could make a living in art," she recalled. "I saw my first art exhibit at 26, because I came from a very poor family. I didn't know museums existed. I saw a retrospective of works by Marc Chagall at the Pasadena Museum of Art, and my life stood still. It was a transformation for me. At 26 I knew I had to paint, but I didn't think 'I am an artist, I will become an artist.'"

Larson was introduced to her other great art influence when she gained "the great privilege of studying with Corita Kent."

Then known as Sister Mary Corita, Kent was a major shaper of fine art being used in the graphic world in the '60s. She resurrected the art of silkscreen.

"Her totally unorthodox and her inimitable way of 'teaching' art was a total release for me and everyone she came in contact with," Larson exclaimed.

"The color, spontaneity, freedom and poetry I saw in Chagall's work heightened the insights I had gotten from being with Corita. She is now a social activist and educator whose works are shown in major collections around the world. Her genius is ubiquitous."

Later, while working with an experimental teaching program in East Los Angeles, Larson utilized some of the teaching methods she'd learned from Corita Kent. Her students were bilingual Hispanic children.

"I was using a lot of art — performing and dancing as well as painting. Corita came into the classroom because she heard what I did was unique; that's when Corita and I really connected. What I'd listened to in her classes I could transfer to my kids. They were writing poetry, making seven-foot murals, creating dramas. She watched me for five years and said, 'Lynn, I'd like to write a book with you.' That's when Corita and I really understood and knew each other. That book never materialized. However, we'll see what the universe provides."

FOR LARSON there is "9-to-5 work" and then there is "real work."

"For some reason I've always done my 'real work.' There's always been in me a passion and intensity for being creative. It's almost always involved in high energy. Everything I've done in my life has been done with that passionate energy. I love being alive."

Childhood memories back up Larson's assertions about the drive that brings her artistic vision into reality.

During the second world war, she recalled, many American families were encouraged to cultivate "victory gardens" to supplement their diet in the face of rationing.

"I was attending public school and even they had a victory garden," Larson noted. "My father, mother, brother, two neighbors and myself each cultivated a quarter-acre victory garden. Little by little everyone dropped by the wayside. Then I ended up tending it by myself as well as helping with the garden at school. I was so taken by the beauty of the forms, the shapes, the dew on the vegetables. I know that somewhere in those victory gardens, my whole being was being nourished."

Bringing into focus the lesson learned in that victory garden, Larson believes that "the garden will contain me for the rest of my life. I've only just scratched the surface."

"I'm developing as a serious painter in galleries around the United States. There is the marketplace part of me that is yearning to be used," she stated. "There is the commercial world of posters, wallpaper, fabric. In the fall I will begin my own publishing company, produce my own fine art posters. I'm looking into designing some fabric. I may be illustrating a couple of children's books. And there are other projects, not yet clearly defined."

"Currently I'm working with florals in a rather formal way — isolated formal images. I see myself doing gigantic wall-to-wall floral scenes, in which when you enter the gallery and be surrounded by a garden."

Two years ago Larson found herself immersed in a garden of a different sort, a walled garden paradise that comprised an entire city block in Honolulu. It was part of a Buddhist shrine.

"I stumbled into that botanical garden and I went back it every day for seven days. I only got as far as a 10-by-10-foot square, because there is so much to see, so much to absorb. I drew every day for at least a couple of hours. This is my analogy about the interior space. The planet really is a garden to be experienced."

A review of her life reveals that all of Larson's great role models have been women.

"There was my mother who sang, my French grandmother who taught me about the earth, my Swedish grandmother who taught me about baking bread and about cloth — she was a seamstress. All that stuff that started way back as a child is just surfacing now."

The artist maintains that she has many precious memories, one of them acquired at age 9 when her family moved to a rural community in Southern California at the close of the depression.

"My French grandmother was living with us and in moving, we were each limited to a trunk of possessions. The movers struggled mightily to move my grandmother's trunk off the truck. It was opened and inside of it were two things, rocks and cuttings from geranium plants and cactus. Those were my grandmother's most prized possessions. Those river rocks were phenomena to her — holy pieces. She felt connected to the earth."

Larson is also ever aware of the advanced technology that makes possible the destruction of earth.

"I feel oppression and the depression of the threat, but I also have a sense of the evolution and revolution that is happening," Larson stated.

"I'm not saying this prophetically, it's really here. We're on the brink of an immense interior revolution. That truly is the hope — the belief I have that the arms race will be turned around by personal transformation. We're now experiencing a long and exciting reach into the limitless layers of self-discovery."

Great Monterey Squid Festival boasts food and fun

ANYONE WHO ever questioned that the Monterey Peninsula is the calamari capital of the world will be set straight Saturday and Sunday, May 24-25, during the third annual Great Monterey Squid Festival.

Live entertainment, exhibits and vendors purveying squid in its infinite variety set the stage at the Monterey Fairgrounds and Exhibition Park, located just off highways 1 and 68 in Monterey.

Festival hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily. Admission is $3.50 for adults, $1.50 for children ages 6 to 12. Children 5 and under are admitted free.

The festival features the incredible, edible, elegant squid, prepared in dozens of different recipes by restaurants from Carmel, Fisherman's Wharf and Cannery Row. The delicate flavor of the Monterey Bay squid makes it an international favorite with calamari fans. Also available will be a variety of other seafoods, fresh off the boat, some delectable old world taste treats, plus a menu of traditional, popular foods.

With more than 100 vendors and exhibitors invited to this year's festival, visitors will encounter a variety of arts and crafts, exhibits, displays and an expanded free entertainment schedule. A fourth platform stage will be added to the program featuring entertainment for children.

Exhibits include arts, crafts, history of commercial fishing, cleaning and preparation of squid, marine life information and touch-tanks.

Last year's festival-goers downed more than 2,500 pounds of squid, nearly 1,000 gallons of wine, 2,200 gallons of beer, and 1,400 pounds of bread, pastries and pasta. The festival is sponsored by the Monterey Kiwanis Club, and all proceeds will help support charitable community activities and agencies.

Following is a list of squid festival entertainers and their performance times.

THEATER REVIEW

BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

'Guys and Dolls' a sure bet

LOOKING FOR a splashy, tuneful revival of a famous '50s musical? Odds are eight to five you will find it in Monterey Peninsula College's current production of Guys and Dolls.

James Dunn's lively direction is abetted by Lucretia Butler's snappy choreography, Constance Gamiere's colorful costuming, and most of all by a wonderful Broadway street scene designed by D. Thomas Beck and Carey Crockett and spangled with vintage '50s neon (also designed by Beck).

MPC's reputation for producing musicals takes a giant step forward with this production, for the choruses are strong and disciplined, the dance moves more sophisticated than I have seen before on the MPC main stage, and the show's pacing is generally fine.

On opening night, the show's major weakness was in the orchestra pit, especially in the wind section, and Bill Houle as Nicely-Nicely (singing "Fugue for Tinhorns") had trouble shouting down the accompaniment. But by the third number ("The Oldest Established..."), the show hit its stride and came alive with all the Runyonesque characters and Frank Loesser songs for which Guys and Dolls, despite a plot too silly for words, is justly popular.

Guys and Dolls holds up a funhouse mirror to conventional '50s values. The average housewife may have wondered what her life would have been like had she sought fame on Broadway. Adelaide (LaVonne Rae Andrews), the star of the Hot Box nightclub, fantasizes instead about "a normal life," by which she means marriage, children, and "a home with wallpaper and bookends." If her fantasy is unusually well thought out, it has been a long time in the making, for Adelaide has been engaged for 14 years to Nathan Detroit (Don Porter), an inveterate gambler who runs "the oldest established permanent floating crap game in New York" and whose idea of the perfect marriage is engagement.

In the poker game of love, Adelaide doesn't have a pair, for the man's view is neatly summed up by natty master gambler Sky Masterson (Danny Gochner): "No matter how pleasant a doll's company may be, she'll always take second place to a pair of aces back to back." Bravely said, but Masterson, who cannot resist a gamble and never waffles on a marker, has his own romantic problems with pretty Sarah Brown (Christy Laschiver), a drum beating soldier in God's army. (I told you the plot was too silly for words.)

There are too many fine performances and well produced numbers to mention. Among them are LaVonne Rae Andrews' appealing and very funny Miss Adelaide (with "Adelaide's Lament" a high spot); Don Porter's Joisey-speaking Nathan Detroit, who is diverting down to the smallest comic gesture throughout the show; Danny Gochner's silky Sky Masterson, especially in "Luck Be A Lady," a particularly well staged number; and Charlie Gilbert's touching rendition of "More I Cannot Wish You." Christy Laschiver as Sarah Brown is lovely in voice and appearance, and her reversal from straight arrow holy roller to lovestruck ingenue (though stupidly motivated) is convincing and fun to watch. And Kevin R. Hanstick's Benny Southstreet lends vocal strength and solid timing to several numbers, topping out in the title song.

But when you come right down to it, it's Bill Houle's Nicely-Nicely who rolls the natural sevens, belting out "Sit Down, You're Rocking the Boat" in an energy-laden production number that almost stops the show.

Director James Dunn's clever eye for stage business shows itself to good advantage, most clearly in the comic mimed sequences that frame the action of the play and in the coherence of the smallest production elements. In this production, everything works together to create a big musical experience, lush with visuals and comedy, but a little hampered by the orchestra. All things considered, Guys and Dolls makes good on its marker.

Cemetery tree

MAUDE (Rosamond Goodrich) explains to Father Finnigan (Jim Jensen) why she's planting a tree in the cemetery in the GroveMont Theater production of Harold and Maude.

Local author makes her mark in Bulwer-Lytton contest

and calm and pleasant, the second half still balmy and quite pleasant for those who hadn't heard the scream at all, but not calm or balmy or even very nice for those who did hear the scream, discounting the little period of time during the actual scream itself when your ears might have been hearing it but your brain wasn't reacting yet to let you know."

"There is a kind of serious side to this contest," Rice asserted. "The serious side is 'don't be serious.' We try to encourage recreational use of language and try to get people to sharpen their skills. The test of a true writer is I think he'd rather be abused than neglected."

A LOCAL CANDIDATE for abuse is T. Holt Sutton, who juggles her literary exploits with jobs as a licensed real estate agent and operator of a Carmel auto detailing service.

Her "Sister Autorella" entry provided "no remuneration," merely inclusion in the "Son of..." book.

"Certainly I will enter the contest every year," Sutton said. "The next sentence is going to have to be more tedious than any I've ever submitted so far. I guess I'm going to have to scrape further on the bottom of the barrel."

"Writing and reading have been my lifelong passions," Sutton observed. Thus she was compelled to take her bachelor's degree in creative writing from the University of California at Santa Cruz.

Sutton is a 1973 graduate of Carmel High School, where she made a mark of a different color on graduation day.

"The week before the actual ceremony I decided to take part," she recalled. "Our class had long ago chosen gowns of royal blue for the girls and navy for the boys. The cap and gown company promised to rush my order. It arrived the afternoon before the big day."

"I ripped open the box and I found my gown, size medium and snowy WHITE. At first I was mortified. Then I decided that I would wear the white gown. I demanded to wear it in spite of the principal's protest. He spent several minutes of his opening speech informing the audience that I was not special. I smiled the whole day as I knew better."

Sutton's interests are many. On her own she travelled the United States and Canada, a total of some 14,000 miles, by Greyhound bus.

"I'd like to travel for two months of every year to collect plots and settings for my novels," the author noted.

"I'd like to have a number of novels under my belt, and a few best-sellers. I would like to be compared to my favorite mystery and suspense novelists," she said.

"Stemming from my passionate interest in cars and driving, I would like to attend the anti-terrorist driving school at Sears Point and obtain my chauffeur's license," Sutton added. "Then there is a demanding school for real-English butlers in London. I have read that it is as exacting as medical school, and very few women have graduated from the program. I intend to become one of them. Both occupations are compatible with being a writer and will provide an enormous wealth of fodder for my typewriter."

In her senior year at UC Santa Cruz, Sutton drafted 90 pages of her first novel, an adventure story about girls and horses written for young adults. It is her hope to cultivate her work in this genre by attending the Highlights for Children fiction workshop at Chautauqua, N.Y.

The most difficult writing skill to come by, in Sutton's view, is "the discipline of making yourself write and treating it like you would any high-power job — actually working so many hours per day on a schedule and produce a manuscript. The writing itself I don't find hard. The re-writing I don't find difficult — it's the discipline."

Sutton has her own formula for cultivating discipline.

"If my house is in perfect order, absolutely clean and done, then I feel at peace, then I can do it. If I could make a good living writing, I would have a housekeeper. I have the urge to put everything in order when I write. Because when I'm putting things in order, I'm putting my mind in order. You have to discipline yourself."

For those who would enter the 1987

Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest, the rules are simple, and entries will be taken through Jan. 1.

- Contestants must write the opening sentence to the worst possible hypothetical novel in any genre they choose. Genres include adventure, children's literature, detective, historical, horror, murder mystery, gothic romance, generic romance, vile puns, Western, science fiction/fantasy and spy.

- Each entry must be submitted on a three-by-five card with the author's name, address, telephone number and genre on the back.

- There is no limit to the number of entries which may be submitted. Brevity, unlike neatness and accuracy, counts.

- Anything you submit becomes the property of the Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest and may be used against you in a court of law.

MUSIC CORNER BY JO ANN LA TORRA

I Cantori strikes paydirt; authentic Baroque delights

I CANTORI closed its year with a concert of Romantic sacred choral music at the Carmel Mission Basilica last weekend, May 17 and 18. Although the three composers represented (Bruckner, Brahms, Faure) were born within a 20-year span, they depict three individual solutions to the musical questions of the later 19th century. In spite of the temporal proximity of the chosen music, there was more than sufficient contrast to keep attention alive.

The oldest of the three, Anton Bruckner, was the only one who followed the highly chromatic trends of the late 19th century, influenced as he was by Wagner. Those listeners who have some difficulty with Bruckner's very long symphonies would be pleasantly surprised by the choral works, as all the richness of the harmonic language is there, but in more concise form. A deeply religious man, Bruckner wrote many sacred works. Sal Ferrentelli chose two a capella motets to open the program: a seven-part Ave Maria, and a setting of a gradual text, Os justi. They were very nicely performed.

Schicksalslied, Op. 54, by Brahms, was a change of pace, with the chorus joined by an orchestra. This is a curious piece, because the text, especially in the second part, is quite gloomy and pessimistic, but the music is filled with charming tone painting that belies the gloom. Only the ominous beats of the timpani remind us where we are. And for how long.

The second half of the program was devoted to Faure's popular Requiem. Although Faure lived well into the 20th century, he was largely untouched by developments around him. He found a harmonic language that suited him and stuck with it. Much of his music is banal, but there are some excellent pieces here and there, and the popularity of this Mass is deserved.

Ferrentelli directed chorus and orchestra in a dramatic, thrilling performance. His group is trained to respond instantly — not five bars down the road — and it paid off here.

Velvali de Ayxa and Reg Huston were the capable soprano and baritone soloists, although one had the feeling they would have been happier in an opera. The orchestra was clearly more at home in the 19th century style and, in general, was all right.

The few minor complaints — diction in German, tendency of the sopranos to lose energy when singing softly — did not take away from the highly enjoyable evening.

A HIGHLY ENJOYABLE evening of quite another sort — 17th century — was enthusiastically received by an unfortunately small audience on Sunday evening at the Monterey Conference Center. The Monterey City Arts Commission brought the last concert of the Santa Cruz Baroque Festival to Monterey and offered it free. The hall should have been SRO.

A couple of Renaissance composers sneaked into an otherwise High Baroque concert, but no one seemed to mind. The program was a mix-and-match affair featuring soprano, Baroque flute, Baroque violin, bass viola da gamba and harpsichord. All the players were comfortable with their instruments, i.e., they were not doing this as an exotic departure from what they usually do. They were also comfortable with Baroque performance techniques so that there was nothing self-conscious about it.

Carol Plantamura, soprano, stole the show with an ingratiating combination of voice, technique and showmanship. The two songs by the great Italian composer, Frescobaldi, were wonderful. Much of this music is improvised, so a lot depends on the performers' rapport. Harpsichordist Linda Burman-Hall worked very well with the singer, and they both obviously enjoyed themselves.

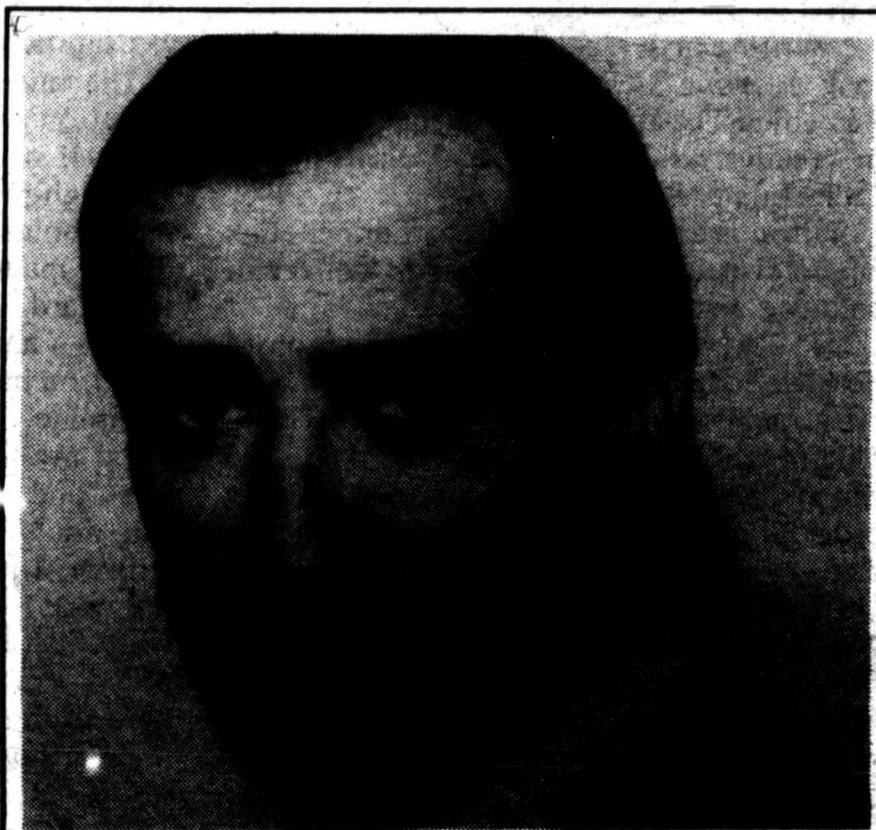

Leslie Hirsch, violin, gave a very stylish performance of a sonata by Castello, also 17th century. The Italian style is flamboyant; if you don't think it is possible to be flamboyant on a harpsichord and Baroque violin, you have never heard good Baroque playing.

Leta Miller, Baroque flute, and M. Luciana Lombardi, viola da gamba, rounded out the ensemble.

Not everything was equally wonderful, nor was everything absolutely authentic. But to hear the music on the instruments for which it was (mostly) intended is an ear-opener for those willing to have their ears opened. Since the composers knew these sounds, as opposed to the sounds of 200 years later which they did not know, they naturally wrote to suit them.

Plantamura, incidentally, is well-known in Southern California for her singing of new music. That may not prove anything. Or it may show that once one makes a move to extend the technique, one can go back as well as forward, benefitting considerably as a musician.

It was a nice present from the Arts Commission and we hope they will not be put off by the small attendance.

LEE GREENWOOD'S patriotic anthem, God Bless the U.S.A., is among the hits he will perform during the first Monterey Music Festival, arriving Monday, May 26 at Laguna Seca Recreation Area. # New Mexico photographer awarded Ferguson Grant

HOLLY ROBERTS of Zuni, New Mexico, is the recipient of the 1986 Ferguson Grant awarded by The Friends of Photography.

The ongoing series for which the award was made is composed of silver gelatin prints that are hand-painted with oils. The images are haunting and mythological and have been influenced by Roberts' experience on the Zuni reservation.

The $2,000 award has been presented annually since 1972 by The Friends of Photography to an emerging photographer who has demonstrated excellence in and commitment to the field of creative photography. It is the purpose of the Ferguson Grant to assist in the professional and artistic growth of the recipient.

Holly Roberts was born in 1951 in Boulder, Colo. She earned her bachelor's degree with special distinction from the University of New Mexico in 1973, after studying at both Belles Artes de Mexico in San Miguel de Allende, Mexico and the University of New Mexico extension in Quito, Ecuador.

In 1973 she received a Curator Fellowship at the Tamarind Institute in New Mexico and served as curator there until 1978. Roberts was awarded a graduate fellowship at Arizona State University in 1978. She received her M.F.A. degree, along with the Henry Laurence Gully Memorial Graduate Award for outstanding achievement, in 1981. She has shown her work in numerous solo exhibitions in the United States and Mexico.

A different Ferguson Grant juror is selected for each annual competition so that, over the years, the award reflects a broad range of photographic ideas. Jonathan Green, professor of photography and director of the University Gallery of Fine Art at Ohio State University, Columbus, served as the 1986 Ferguson juror.

Green has also taught at the Massachusetts Institute and the Visible Language Workshop.

He has authored several books, including Camera Work: A Critical Anthology; The Snapshot; Celebrations, co-authored with Minor White, and most recently, American Photography: A Critical History, 1945 to the Present. His photographs are in major museum collections in both the United States and Europe.

In response to Roberts' work, which Green chose as the strongest among the 156 portfolios submitted, Green wrote the following: "Holly Roberts' work is haunting, powerful, existential, full of angst. The mysterious, uncomfortable presence of these painted photographs stayed with me long after I had left the room."

"In these images the paint is not pastel, or applied tentatively, as in many earlier mergers and mixed-media work; it is aggressive and primary. The paint is overwhelming to the point that the photograph almost entirely disappears. One is forced to search to find that residue of reality indicated by photography; that residue that provides the base, the grounding in the real world before brush strokes and Zuni marks and myths overpower."

"The work Roberts submitted for the grant shows constant change and growth. It points to new directions for her personal growth and to new directions for the field."

The award to Holly Roberts marks the 15th year that the grant has been presented. Past Ferguson Grants have been awarded to Linda Robbenolt (1985), Catherine Wagner (1984), Tamarra Kaida (1983), Lawrence McFarland (1982), Susan Felner (1981), Mark Klett (1980), David MacLay (1979), Jo Ann Callis (1978), Meridel Rubenstein (1977), Richard Misrach (1976), Sally Mann (1975), Ken Graves (1974), Joseph Jachna (1973) and Anthony Hernandez (1972).

For more information call 624-6330.

TWO MEN HAVING TEA (right side of diptych) is a 16-by-40-inch oil on silver print by Holly Roberts, recipients of the 1986 Friends of Photography Ferguson Grant. Grant juror was Jonathan Green.

Museum names photo contest winners

Fifty winning photographs have been selected from the more than 750 entries that were submitted for judging in the Fourth Annual Photographic Competition at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Jim Alinder, executive director of the Friends of Photography, judged the exhibition and was pleased at the quality of the works submitted.

"The entries included a wide range of imagery, technique and esthetic," Alinder commented, "and were of excellent quality. The resulting exhibition may be viewed as somewhat of a microcosm of the trends currently being explored in contemporary photography."

Best of Show Purchase Prize was awarded to Mike Mandel of Santa Cruz for his Cibachrome print Emptying the Fridge. First place was awarded to Laura Volkerding of San Francisco for her gelatin silver print Date Grove Coachella; second place went to M. Casanave of Monterey for her untitled print made with a pinhole camera.

Third place was awarded to Robert Dawson of San Francisco for his gelatin silver print Glen Canyon Bridge. Three honorable mentions were also awarded to Huntington Witherill of Monterey for his gelatin silver print Bentonite Wall, Caineville, Utah; to Brad Cole of Carmel for his gelatin silver print Seaside; and to Ken Miller of San Francisco for his untitled gelatin silver print.

THE BENTLEY BROTHERS Circus brings together trained animal acts, clowns, death-defying aerialists and acrobats, not to mention very well behaved baboons. Three circus performances are scheduled Monday, May 26 at the Monterey Peninsula College sports stadium, 980 Fremont Blvd., Monterey.

Three-ring circus pulls into town

A THREE-RING CIRCUS populated by pachyderms, stallions, dogs and even ligers (part lion, part tiger) pulls into the Monterey Peninsula College sports stadium on Monday, May 26.

The Bentley Brothers International Three-Ring Circus will perform at 1, 4 and 7:30 p.m. Monday. The circus is sponsored by the Monterey County Sheriff's Deputies Benefit Association.

The program includes wild animals, performing horses, aerialists and acrobats, high wire daredevils, and the Bentley Brothers contingent of clowns.

The Ventura Duo from Hungary, the Gardio Duo from Mexico City and the Phoenix Duo, fresh from a triumphant European tour, combine to give an exhibition of aerial gymnastics in the land of sawdust and spangles.

A change of pace is comedy cavorting and acrobatic antics of the Anastacini Trio from Milan, Italy, with the Arabian Tom Foolery of Charlie the Camel. And from Algeria, the Rubino Brothers, recognized as the whirlwind teeterboard practitioners, put on a display of balance and agility.

Carol Marcan from Yugoslavia, a wild animal trainer, will put her den of Bengal tigers and ligers through their paces. The ligers are a unique attraction, part lion, part tiger, and are two of the only seven in the world today. Showman Stimax will parade his clever chimpanzees, those natural clowns of the jungle.

Tickets are $8.50 for adults, $5.50 for children under 12. Children will be admitted free if they obtain one of the free children's tickets offered at stores that display the Bentley Brothers circus poster.

For more information about Monday's circus, call 394-6666.

Neuro-linguistics to be addressed

The Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung will present a talk/discussion, "Neuro-Linguistic Programming: Consciousness, Communication, Culture and Carl," at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, May 24.

The program will be facilitated by Peter Little, who completed his master of science degree in human relations studying the Jungian perspective of language and culture. The evening will be divided into a 40-minute talk and, after a short break, a question period.

Registration fee is $5. The program will be presented at All Saints' Church, Ninth and Dolores, Carmel.

Focus of the program are examples of the use of language as a cultural marker. It will explore some of the work of Benjamin Lee Whorf and Edward Sapir and its relationship to Carl Jung's work on language and the collective unconscious.

Among the samples of languages to be discussed are:

- A whistling language that discriminates "speakers" by sex;

- How NLP applications are influencing the training of supervisors, managers and top executives to enable them to communicate more effectively;

- How a mild "oath" reflects a culture's view of the relationship between people, the land, and spirituality;

- Differences between a New World culture and an Old World culture that lead to differing concepts of time as reflected in language;

- Why Roger Williams left Massachusetts and the problems he had with the Narragansett Indians;

- Common mistakes made by children and Jung's view of the origin of these mistakes in the unconscious.

The Friends of C.G. Jung is a group of people who are finding mutual support while enlarging their knowledge of compatible psychological insights. They maintain that applications of those insights to their everyday lives are helped by open discussion with others.

For more information about the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung, write or call 853 Pacific St., Monterey, 93940, 649-8809.

Paintings by Carmel folk artist Donna Moses exhibited

ORIGINAL CARD paintings from her 1986 collection are the focus of the premiere one-person show for Carmel artist Donna Moses at the Bill W. Dodge Gallery in Carmel.

A gala champagne reception, to which the public is invited, will open the exhibition from 4 to 7 p.m. Saturday, May 24. The artist and gallery owner Bill Dodge will be on hand to greet the guests.

The exhibition also embraces card paintings prepared for presentation to a national card publisher as well as 20 new paintings that reflect the theme, "Some Day My Prince

Will Come," depicting the evolution of a couple from courtship to a family with 10 children.

Largely a self-taught artist, Moses showed an average interest in art as a child. She took a few art classes in college, primarily on the crafts side. It wasn't until after she was married to Deryl Moses, an airline pilot, that the artist's mother gave her a set of discarded oil paints. Moses started making wall pieces out of wood — mostly copies of cartoon characters — for her children's walls and other painted wood crafts as gifts. Then people began to buy her creations.

She was eventually "discovered" by a would-be sales agent who sold an order for 182 wood hangings to I. Magnin, to be delivered in 30 days. Donna felt she had arrived. After having drawn in several neighbors and at great expense to her growing family and her own sanity, she completed the order and said, "Never again."

Her serious art career, still grounded primarily in crafts, began in Los Gatos, where, with a group of other homemakers, she worked on an annual Christmas boutique for 12 years. Her first venture into "folk art" consisted of making painted dolls out of wood and cloth, candlesticks, holiday centerpieces, folk angels, wood hangings, and other painted wooden objects.

This laid the groundwork for her present style of painting, which she describes as "peasant folk." She is influenced by her Swedish and German heritage and exposure to folk art of other countries introduced into her home by her mother and through her frequent European travels, courtesy of her airline pilot husband.

DONNA MOSES, Carmel's "peasant folk art" painter, will attend a reception honoring her work on Saturday, May 24 at the Bill W.

Dodge Gallery in Carmel. The public is invited to attend the 4 to 7 p.m. gathering.

Slide lecture will focus on images of mermaids

Patricia Altman, curator of folk art and textiles at the Museum of Cultural History of Los Angeles, will present a slide lecture on "Images of the Mermaid in the New World" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 22 at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. Altman will discuss colonial images of the mermaid and their transformation in the new world, focusing on their use and development in Latin America.

The mermaid has long been a fascinating image of folk art and popular culture, paralleling the centuries-old legends surrounding their supposed sightings by auspicious travelers.

The museum is located at 559 Pacific St. in downtown Monterey. Admission to the museum is free of charge Tuesdays through Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays from 1 to 4 p.m.

Futons for comfort and style

Futon is the Japanese word for bed. The Japanese have used cotton to make their mattresses for over 2,000 years. And, as it turns out, cotton remains one of nature's firmest and most comfortable materials for a mattress.

Futons & Such makes their own cotton futons just like the Japanese have for these many centuries: three-inch-thick mattresses that are stacked on top of each other. These thin mattresses are easy to handle, move, fold, fluff and air.

More recently, the Japanese designed a foldable mattress made out of foam called the "shikibuton." Futons & Such carries shikibutons that are made of high quality, firm foam that will last five to 10 years, depending on the quality you choose.

The cotton futon and foam shikibuton can be placed on beautiful and cleverly designed, all-wood frames that fold from couch, to lounge, to bed. The frames range in price and design from the simple to the extraordinary, and make the simple futons into uniquely styled and functional furniture.

Come to Futons & Such and experience the alternative in design, firmness and functionality. They are located at 639-B Lighthouse Ave. in New Monterey. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and by appointment. Visa, MasterCard and Discovery charge cards are accepted.

Choosing and giving The Perfect Gift

By JANICE TARLETON

It is more blessed to give than to receive, but if after hours of shopping you're consistently coming up empty-handed or, at best, with a ho-hum gift, you probably don't think of giving as much of a blessing.

In fact, you might even call it a curse, but before you resign yourself to living life as a scrooge, read on. There is good news — with just a little thought and planning, you can come up with the perfect gift for virtually any person or occasion and present it in a way that will keep the recipient smiling all year long.

Just ask Debi Netzly, owner of Creative Spirit, a contemporary paper goods store located in The Crossroads. According to Debi, how you wrap and present the gift is at least half the fun of giving. A very creative spirit herself, she has more ideas for how to wrap and present gifts than there are gifts. But, first things first: finding the gift.

Begin by taking a moment to think about the person you are buying for. This one rather commonsense tip can save hours of aimless and often fruitless shopping.

"Before I start shopping I get to know a client," says Sheridan Wood, a Carmel gift consultant and personal shopper. "I want to know their background, their relatives, hobbies, interests, the climate they live in and how they spend their life."

Take your father, for example. (Remember Father's Day is just around the corner.) Think about his occupation and hobbies. Is he active and outgoing or does he like to stay home and watch television?

"If he's a TV viewer, I might suggest a lap tray or a special glass; or, if he's a beer drinker, a stein or mug," says Stephanie Bennett, a salesperson in the gift department at Ford's department store in Pacific Grove. "If he has a car that he loves, you could get an organizer for the glove compartment."

Clocks are always a good gift choice, and if your father is a boatman, consider getting one in a nautical design, Bennett suggests. For the sports-minded father, why not buy a wall rack where he can hang his hat, baseball glove, or fishing gear? To be safe, you can always buy a nice pen set, Bennett says, but with so many interesting and useful gifts available, she advises, "forget the tie."

Actually, in Carmel, you can't go wrong with a tie, provided it's a Talbott tie, says Wood, who has worked in retail for 10 years and has been shopping for others for several years. "Talbott is always up on the latest in styles and fabrics," she says.

Clothing is nearly always a good gift for men, Wood says, but, in case the fit is wrong, make sure the garment you purchase is returnable. Leather goods, such as wallets and appointment books, are right too. Whether it's clothing, or masculine accessories, she suggests visiting Adam Fox, located on Ocean Avenue and San Carlos in Carmel.

Creative Spirit has the perfect gift for the doting father (and what father doesn't like to brag about his kids?). It's a poster with the words "My kid did this," printed on it with room to tape in a favorite drawing, etc. It's nice enough to be matted and framed and perfect to hang in his office.

A bit of an offbeat idea is to box up a bouquet of helium-filled mylar balloons. Netzly says you can personalize the balloons by writing a message on the back or attaching coupons for a gift or special service.

Shopping for the graduate? Wood says you'll find the latest in clothing for young men at The Back Pocket, Ocean Avenue and Mission in Carmel. Records and tapes nearly always please and women of all ages enjoy lingerie, robes and velvet outfits. You can't go wrong with a plant or flowers either, says Wood.

Remember that to purchase a perfect gift, you don't have to spend a lot of money. Nearly everyone loves gold jewelry and recently the price of 14 carat has gone way down, says Wood. Watch the newspaper for specials — it's one way to get more for your money.

Nice picture frames, priced inexpensively, are another good suggestion from Wood.

Netzly's idea for the perfect graduation gift, and perhaps the best one yet, is to videotape the graduation ceremony, party, as well as comments from friends. That's a gift the graduate will treasure for a lifetime. A less expensive idea is to put together a scrapbook of the person's life, including graduation pictures.

If you're shopping for an anniversary, check the list published by Hallmark, Bennett suggests. It may spark some very appropriate gift ideas.

Still shopping aimlessly? Seek help. Salespeople are a good source — they know what's available in the store and are ready to give gift suggestions, often pointing the way to the perfect present. Some stores, like Macy's, even have a gift consulting service, and, if you give up completely, shoppers like Wood are available to take over.

Now the fun begins. With gift in hand, you're ready to prepare it for presentation. Planning to throw it into a box, wrap it up with some dime store all-occasion paper and slap a bow on top? Think again.

"It's the first impression the person has of the gift that's important," says Netzly. Consequently, some things are better left unwrapped. For instance, Netzly prepared a teddy bear for presentation by attaching a bouquet of balloons to his hand and putting a large bow around his neck. "That was much more exciting than wrapping him up in a box," she notes.

Instead of wrapping items, hide them, then attach a string and let the recipient follow the string to his gift. Another idea is to use clues.

If your perfect gift is a car, Netzly suggests hiding the car at a friend's house, or even on the dealer's lot and using the clue game. Put a large bow on top, or "wrap" the inside by stuffing it with balloons and putting bows on the steering wheel and mirror. You might even record a cassette tape of congratulations, remembrances or best wishes to be played on the car stereo.

Cassette tapes are a great way to present a gift, she says. If the gift is a trip (a popular graduation present) record a cassette tape in radio talk show style announcing the winner of the trip and play it at a gathering of friends, perhaps a graduation party.

If you want your gift wrapped, Netzly suggests using solid paper, then decorating it yourself with paint pens or stickers. You might even want to attach a balloon to it.

Gift sacks are a great way to wrap (mylar ones are especially popular). Teamed with ribbon, tissue paper, confetti, or with a personal message scrawled on them, they make a striking impression.

Wrapping up the perfect gift doesn't cost a lot, Netzly stresses. "You don't have to go out and spend eight dollars on a package and a bow. It doesn't take that much money — it just takes a little time and thought. It's amazing what a 69-cent sack and 20 cents worth of ribbon can do."

Speaking of sacks, Netzly recommends wrapping up large items in white garbage bags, personalized with paint pens, ribbons, or stickers.

Another fun gift-giving idea is to wrap up several small gifts, then put them in a basket or sack, to be opened one at a time, perhaps every hour. One of Netzly's variations, especially aimed at the graduating collegiate, is to send the package of gifts a week before graduation, to be opened at the rate of one a day. It's a great way to give gifts and encouragement during that tough finals week.

Planning to enclose some money in a greeting card? Wrap up or decorate the envelope just like you would a present.

When it comes to cards, don't settle for thumbing through the regular selection. Custom make your card at Creative Spirit using the Computer Poet. What could be more perfect?

The options are endless and once you start using your own creative spirit you'll start looking for the slightest excuse to give a gift. It really is more blessed to give than to receive.

'LIFE BEFORE Echo' could be this photo's title showing sculptor Gutzon Borglum and a model of Mount Rushmore circa 1926. If Borglum had access to Echo, which specializes in bronze busts made by computer, he could have made the sculpture in a matter of days. Echo, 2062 Sunset Dr. in Pacific Grove, takes 500,000 measurements of a subject's head and shoulders, then stored in a computer, which uses a precision machine to sculpt a likeness from a solid block of material. It's the only invention of its kind in the world. Call them at 373-6224 or 373-1441 for more information and gift ideas.

Give a computer-sculpted gift

Fine sculpture by computer. Impossible, you say? Not at Echo where art is fast becoming a science.

At Echo, located at 2062 Sunset Drive in Pacific Grove (right across from Hayward Lumber), bronze busts, the kind artists have been chiseling and carving for centuries, are produced with the convenience and speed of portrait photography.

It works like this: the subject poses in front of a specially designed camera in a darkened studio. In 15 seconds, as the seat (a potter's wheel) turns around once, the camera makes 500,000 measurements of the shape of the person's head and shoulders.

The measurements are instantly stored in a computer's memory and the computer then uses these measurements to control a precision machine which carves the sculpture from a solid block of material. The result is a bust that's as perfect in likeness as a photograph — an echo of you.

Developed by locals Lloyd Addleman, a retired electrical engineer; his wife Pat, a freelance artist and photographer; and son David, a computer programmer, the invention is the only one of its kind in the world and is literally causing a revolution among sculptors, plastic surgeons and many others. As the process is refined, the applications seem to keep growing.

The finished busts, available in one to three weeks, are cast in bronze or bronze finish and are available in sizes from three inches high to life-size. They are mounted on a base of marble or wood.

What a perfect gift for the person who has everything. Call 373-6224 or 373-1441 for an appointment or information on gift certificates. The studio is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

HILDA LTD. is always improving on near-perfection by combining the timeless beauty of Icelandic wool with fashion-forward styling. The secret is in the rich fleece of Icelandic sheep and innovative ways of using it, all trademarks of Hilda Ltd.'s fashions. In Carmel they're on Ocean between San Carlos and Dolores.

Hilda reaches for perfection

How can you improve on perfection? Well, Hilda Ltd. has done it, by combining the timeless beauty of Icelandic wool with fashion-forward styling.

There's classic two-piece suits for women with European-style jackets and straight skirts, long pullover sweaters that can be worn alone as a dress or layered over stirrup pants or tights, fully lined lightweight flannel wool pants, as well as the woolen hood wrap, so popular in Europe now.

Hilda Ltd.'s traditional sweaters for women have taken on a new flair with wool dyed to an icy blue and soft mauve. In lightweight wool, they're perfect for the year-round Carmelite.

For men there's jackets and sweaters with new eye-catching designs, as well as vests.

But, don't worry, Hilda Ltd. still carries all those jackets, sweaters, capas, coats, hooded pullovers and accessories that you've come to love.

The centuries of breeding have produced hundreds of subtle earth and dark sky tones in the wool's color — all natural shades created by Mother Nature herself. The result is 100 percent natural warmth and beauty, without the weight.

Come and see the new, innovative ways Hilda Ltd. can work with wool. The Carmel store, located on Ocean Avenue (between San Carlos and Dolores streets), is open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday; and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Not only is Hilda Ltd. expanding on its clothing line, but also its line of stores. You'll now find stores devoted exclusively to Hilda fashions in San Francisco, Boston, Pittsburgh, Barbados, and St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

Reach out and touch someone with a new phone as a gift

Telephones are a common convenience and a necessity. But while most of us take them for granted, not all brands and models are equal. In fact, in this age of multiple choice, it's important that you make shopping for a new phone a hands-on experience.

You really owe it to yourself to visit a store where you can try a phone's controls, hear its ring, even listen to the voice quality on a call. Some stores even have simulating devices to give you a good idea of a model's performance under actual calling conditions.

Recently, the electronics engineers at "Consumer Reports" evaluated 17 "enhanced basic" telephones — the kind that are somewhat more elaborate than no-frills phones.

A phone should feel comfortable to hold and to dial. The handset is particularly important. If you like to do hands-free talking, check how comfortable the receiver feels when it's propped between your head and shoulder.

Examine the keyboard. Can you use it easily or is it cramped? Some phones have only numbered keys — without the familiar set of letters alongside. This may seem unimportant until you try to dial a combination of letters and numbers like 1-800-TRAFFIC or PENNSYLVANIA 6-5000. Take a look at the disconnect button. Could you accidentally cut yourself off as you talk?

Since it's not always obvious how a phone's features work, well-written instructions are essential. Always check the manufacturer's warranty, especially the length. And don't be shy about asking how the store handles repairs. Some will exchange a defective phone for a new one — usually within the first 30 to 90 days of the warranty. After that, you may have to ship the unit elsewhere.

Some stores may loan you a phone while you're waiting for your unit to be repaired. Sometimes, the store's policy on repairs may actually matter more than the manufacturer's warranty.

Although convenience features are nice, it's more important for a phone to deliver loud, clear speech to people at both ends of the line — and to withstand a certain amount of physical and electrical abuse in the process.

When the engineers at "Consumer Reports" evaluated the phones, they tested for listening and speaking volume, voice quality, and hearing-aid compatibility. They purposely abused the phones, repeatedly dropping them on a hard floor and electronically zapping them with voltage surges and static electricity.

Two console models were top-rated — the AT&T Touch-a-Matic 1600 and the ITT Medallion 2480. Also highly rated were the Uniden EX-1020 console, and two trimline-type phones — the GE 2-9260 and the Panasonic VA-8080. Prices ranged from $120 for the AT&T down to $50 for the GE, but discounts are available.

Only you can decide on the features you need. All the tested phones were equipped with such conveniences as memory dialing for frequently called numbers and chain dialing to simplify long-distance calling. Also, all the phones switch between tone and pulse dialing — a feature that can save money if you need a tone dialer for long distance but can use a cheaper pulse line for local calling.

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Trek to Cheppu for unique, out-of-the-ordinary gift ideas

If you would like to take a trip to the Himalayas but prefer sea level to the higher elevations, or if your hiking boots are worn out, a stop at Cheppu from Himalaya will transport you there right from downtown Carmel.

The wonderful ambiance of this newly-opened shop offers antique and contemporary treasures from Nepal, Tibet, Bhutan, Burma and Sikkim. Christine Kolisch, the proprietor of Cheppu, collected the wide range of exotica over the past 12 years, while she was living in Nepal. Cheppu exhibits a profound understanding of and respect for the culture in which Christine immersed herself.

Located in Pantilles Court on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth (behind Em Le's restaurant), Cheppu's mascot, a ferocious looking mannequin dressed in shaman's clothing, greets you.

Inside the store you still find hand-woven Tibetan rugs, made with pure sheep wool and vegetable dyes, puppets and dolls, antique jewelry, Buddhist ritual objects, hand-carved masks worn in festivals and plays. A beautiful antique copper and silver Tibetan teapot is just one of many intriguing vessels to be found; others are made of wood or brass.

One section of the store is devoted to clothing, which includes hand-loomed jackets, hand-painted pure silk dresses, pants and tops. Elaborate antique silk brocade "chubas" (gowns similar to kimonos) are available as well as wood-block printed T-shirts on the more casual side.

Some of the wall space of Cheppu is adorned with color and black and white photographs taken by Kolisch. While living in Kathmandu, she owned a photography gallery representing her work as well as 10 other photographers.

Her Asian gallery also specializes in woodblock prints on rice and silk paper. Both the blocks and their prints are in her Carmel shop, as well as a large assortment of hand-made rice paper stationery.

It is difficult to describe all that awaits you in this Himalayan bazaar — so save a little time to explore another world at Cheppu.

WANT A gift a little out of the ordinary? Cheppu, a new store in Carmel on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth offers traditional jewelry such as that worn by this Tibetan woman, as well as carpets, clothing, artifacts and accessories, all from the area of the world where the Himalayas dominate the landscape. Great gift ideas for the discriminating one on your gift list.

WHETHER IT'S polo or the Concours d'Elegance you'll always look right in fashions from Polo/Ralph Lauren, especially in this charcoal and white 100 percent wool double-breasted Made by Hand nailhead pattern suit combined with a Navy and white striped lisle knit shirt. Her blue floral silk crepe de chine stretched out crewneck dress is also by Ralph Lauren. Available at the Polo/Ralph Lauren shop in Carmel, Sixth and Mission.

Always in fashion with Polo

Ralph Lauren has captured a magical moment in time in his spring 1986 collection. It was a time of elegant gentlemen's clubs in London, ski chalets in St. Moritz, and taking the Blue Train to mild winters in spacious villas on the Riviera. It was a world of lavish glamour — the world of Nancy Cunard, the Fitzgeralds, the Murphys and Bendor Westminster, a world of balls in Venice, of following the bulls in Spain, and of elegant yachts off Cap Ferrat.

The collection includes:

- Elegant handmade suits of finest imported fabrics.
- Cream and tan linen sportcoats and trousers.
- Navy yachting blazers with gold crests.
- Tartan and tweed sportcoats in an array of plaids and houndstooth checks.
- Blazers and sweaters in bold regimental stripes.
- Antique Olympic and tennis activewear.
- Bright chino tops and bottoms, bright knits and sweaters.
- Jackets, knits and fleece in soft oxford shades.

The Polo tailored clothing collection renews the elegant tradition of gentlemen's eating clubs and moves easily from these mahogany paneled chambers to the airy and light mansions of the Caribbean and the Riviera, recapturing the golden age of Fitzgerald. The atmosphere is languid, at ease, the epitome of graceful society. The collection belongs to the world of Sara and Gerald Murphy and to the madcap spirit and careless confidence of the young and sophisticated, the wealthy and the romantic.

Handmade suits in finest merino wool, imported linens and silks in elegant silhouettes, made for the man equally at ease aboard his yacht or in London. The collection steers away from the tailoring embellishments seen in past collections and finds its pure distinction in the timeless quality of simple lines, fine tailoring and magnificent fabrics.

Of special note in clothing are creamy linens with herringbone detail, browns on browns recalling the Duke of Windsor with old world elegance. Clothing worn with casual flair — wrinkled linens worn with lisle sportshirts; pattern on pattern ties; flamboyant pocket hankies; bold and sophisticated society plaids.

A flower in the lapel, brown and white shoes, a bold regimental striped tie in place of a belt recall the era of dashing sophisticates riding in bright convertibles, brilliant and eccentric in their energies and in the statement they made with their lifestyle. Arriving with their well-worn steamer trunks, they filled the quiet spaces, the cool gray mansions of Cap d'Antibes with their undaunted presence.

Crests carry through the yachting mood, evoking an understated and classic grace. And for evening, the collection conveys eloquent simplicity in a shawl collar dinner jacket, striking and white in crisp Irish linen, replete with an elegant white linen shirt, wing collars worn with bow ties, or with satin ties in vivid colors — elegant, with a sporty flair. Spirit and formality combine to strike a perfect society portrait.

The spring 1986 sportswear collection emerges to fit the lifestyle needs of the gentleman at his lawn club or in his sun-bleached home by the sea. Tartans are strong: rich Blackwatch, Gordon and Stewart plaids carry the spirit of the club into cotton sweaters and sportcoats, paired with the tradition of worn khaki chinos.

The sportswear collection also dresses the gentleman for his carefree days by the azure seas with lively antique floral shirts and hot colored knits. Ralph Lauren brings in an air of vitality, turning bright chino fabrics into windbreakers, and then washing them down to soften the color and fabrics for a comfortable fit, faded and easy, like an old favorite.

Simple crewneck sweaters are made from luxurious silk in raw white striped with surprising bright colors. Bright colors also extend into shorts, shirts and pleated jeans, for a casual and active look perfect for a backdrop of bamboo, sand and summer activity.

Polo translates old-fashioned baseball shirts into bright sportshirts and adds more surprises with conversational prints, painting antique tennis and polo themes on campshirts in strong primary colors, and recreating antique surfing scenes in faded, classic aquas and blues.

Ralph Lauren makes a rugged statement in outerwear with jackets made from chino twill and soft, washed duster cloth. Polo offers a fatigue jacket and a frontier expedition jacket that capture the rugged feeling of the Southwest or safari when paired with sturdy twill shorts, hiking boots, a wide-brimmed hat. The image of old Santa Fe arises, lending romance to the simplicity of truly practical Roughwear.

As part of an expanding program, Polo is building the excitement for the Dungaree by Ralph Lauren. This is an easy fitting jean, modeled after traditional work pants to offer wearability and comfort and the solid and strong look of traditional American work clothes. It is made from 14-ounce cotton denim and features an authentic button fly.

Mr. Lauren said, "I decided to call my jeans 'Dungarees' because that is what we always called them years ago, those real and earthy work jeans that had nothing of 'fashion' about them, but a great deal of style."

The Dungaree is substantial, without pretense. Come summer, the line will be expanded to include the Dungaree shirt, the Dungaree jacket, and a new slimmer-cut work jean.

Images of the 1920s Olympics are brought to life with the clean and classic appeal of antique activewear designs for spring. Simple, crested pullovers in ivory accented with red or white touched with navy introduce a distinctive herringbone detail in knitted fabrics. Images of crew teams in the early decades of this century emerge, with athletes wearing layers of easy knits.

The feeling of the sport and the team is carried through to dramatic cotton sweaters in classic ivory with red or navy trim and bold embroidered Polo crests. The feeling is reminiscent of the elegant grace of varsity sports in the 20s and 30s, of men who met for a tennis match dressed in linen trousers, sweaters and oxford shirts, a club look summed up with a classic tie.
